HONOLULU, Aug 15, (via San Francisco per steamer Coptic, Aug. 21.)—[Special Dispatch.] The withdrawal of eodore H. In another way, shipping to New York is an ad-vantage. We do not come into com-petition with the California beet-sugar growers. I do not consider that Davies & Co. have behaved well in the matter as their representative was present a all our meetings, and knew what we were going to do. However, as I said before, I do not think the rest of us will suffer in any way, and the Davies plantations will not net as much money

INDEFINITELY POSTPONED.

American Flag not Yet Raised Over Hawaii.

JEY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.] HONOLULU, Aug. 15, (via San Fran cisco persteamer Coptic, Aug. 21.)—The American flag has not yet been raised over Hawaii, and there is no indication that it will be. Just before the last steamer left for San Francisco, July 27, it was rumored that on August 2, the United States Minister would take possession of the islands. He take possession of the islands. He was to receive definite instructions by the steamer Moana, arriving at Honoiulu July 29, but they evidently failed to come, as the raising of the flag has not been talked of.

The Hawaiian government declined to grant permanent register under the Hawaiian flag for the Pacific Moll.

oriental ports. The vessel cost $750,000, he said, but could be built today for $600,000. He could not appraise her value, but he had heard Capt. Metcalf, Lloyds's surveyor at San Francisco, remark in his presence that the China was not worth more than $200,000.

MacFarlane then took the stand and repeated the history of how he purchased the steamship, giving a mortisage of $200,000 on the vessel; how he had secured a provisional Hawaiian register for her in London, and how he had applied to the collector here for a permanent register, meeting all the requirements of the law in every particular. He stated that he had not signed an agreement to transfer the China back to the Pacific Mail Company, nor had he signed any mortgage other than the one mentioned.

On cross-examination, however, MacFarlane admitted that he was merely the nominal owner of the vessel, and that he was to receive $4250 for his services if he succeeded in securing a permanent register.

The matter has created a great deal of interest in government circles here and it is believed that the court will sustain the stand taken by the executive. The day after the steamer arrived the Cabinet met and considered the sea letter of the China, issued to Col. MacFarlane by Consul Hopkins in London, until that steamer can reach San Francisco; then the sea letter will expire. The Hawaiian government has fully determined not to grant the China a permanent register.

"When the annexation treaty was in the hands of the Foreign Relations Committee, that body wanted to recommend that no foreign vessels, other than American, should be granted Hawaiian registers while the treaty was pending, and refrained from inserting the clause only upon the assurances of this government to Minister Sewall, which were received by him from Washington. This government intends JAPAN'S DEMANDS Three Propositions to Be Submitted to Arbitration.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—The teamer Coptic, which arrived today rom Yokohama via Honolulu, brought the following Japanese advices:

It appears from the Japanese paper government claims that the sale of the ship to Col. McFarlane, a Hawaiian subject, is not a bona fide one.

As soon as the steamer China docked on her arrival from San Francisco on August 11, G. W. MacFarlane, who claimed to be her owner, called upon that the vessel be given a permanent register. The collector, however, restused. The matter was then taken into the courts, and on the 13th inst., a writ of mandamus was issued. The Japanese government is preparing to publishall the correspond-ence and proceedings in the case, in ence and proceedings in the case, in the event of the matter being submitted to arbitration. It will insist upon the settlement of the following claims: First—That the action of Hawaii in refusing the landing of the Japanese was a flagrant violation of treaty. Third—That the Hawaiian government is required to establish a guarantee to avoid future trouble of a similar kind.

was reported to have somewhere in the neighborhood of $130,000 in Klondyke gold in his possession.

Thorpe and his companions talk, but they decline to tell the same story twice, and it is next to impossible to get anything definite from them. Willis Thorpe, father of Ed Thorpe, received a letter a few days ago by the Al-Ki, from his son, saying that he had $150,000 in gold. At least that is what Willis Thorpe is alleged to have told his friends, but now Thorpe and his three companions on the Starr unite on only one point in telling their story, and that is that they have $20,000 between them.

A reporter found Ed Thorpe a mement after the steamer landed and began to ply him with questions. At this moment the elder Thorpe, tather of Ed, who appears to have an antipathy for newspapers in general since th publication of his son's alleged wealth, rushed up and interfered and led his son away.

IBY THE TIMES' SPECIAL WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—[Special Dispatch.] By the steamer Coptic which arrived today. Hongkong advices were received giving the first details of the looting and murder on the steamer Pegu by Achinese pirates on the Penang coast July 8.

Eleven Achinese men and one woman boarded the steamer at Ere, one of the stopping places where pepper was taken on. Capt. Ross, according to custom, searched the men for weapons, but didn't search the woman. She car-ried under her Malay sarong knives with which the bloody work was done. While the captain and Chief Engineer Craigie were at dinner, six armed Achinese burst into the saloon and at-tacked them. The officers were un-armed and defended themselves with chairs, but were terribly slashed about the hands and arms. Both reached deck. Craigie made his way to the engine room where he bolted the door and was safe. He wasn't badly hurt. The captain sprang on deck when he was at-tacked by one of the Achinese with a carving knife from the table who lit-erally disemboweled him. As he fell others hacked him with their knives and he soon breathed his last.

The pirates then attacked the mate and steersmen and cut them down on the bridge. On deck two more of the crew and three Chinese passengers were slain. The vicious pirates ran among the Chinese hacking and slash-ing right and left. They wounded fifteen and drove several overboard. Having terrorized the passengers they thoroughly looted the vessel and ran her near to shore. The safe was opened and $15,000 taken. Two boats were lowered and the pirates made off with the booty.

When the steamer reached Teluk the wounded were taken ashore. The vessel's decks looked like a charnal house, being spattered with the blood and entrails of the slaughtered victims. Capt Ross had been in the Malay trade for fourteen years. Twice before he had been attacked by Achinese pirates, but he was fearless. The place where the crime occurred is the same where a steamer was attacked and looted, the weapons in this case being smuggled "Solid Eight" Worsted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—The attorneys for George K. Fitch, who is trying to oust the members of the "Solid Eight" from the Board of Supervisors, gained their first victory today before Judge Wallace. Mr. Fitch, as a representative taxpayer and consumer of water, alleged that the Supervisors had failed to comply with the law by fixing water rates within the time set by the statute. A demurrer to the complaint filed by the Supervisors was overruled by Judge Wallace, who gave the Supervisors until next Thursday to file their answer, and he will set the date for the trial on the following-day.

Business in the corn pit was on an immense scale, millions of bushels changing hands during the session. The pit was crowded all day and price fluctuations were rapid and violent. Shorts made a mad rush to cover at the opening, and forced prices up 2½ cents over yesterday's closing. The market was influenced greatly by wheat. The buying craze was also manifest in the oats market and an extremely heavy business was transacted. Shorts covered large lines, and all months were taken freely. Sympathy with wheat and corn was of course the chief influence. September opened ½c higher at 19c, sold up to 20½ cand closed at 19½ c.

Provisions were also in great request and sharp advances all around were scored at the opening. Armour's brokers bought heavily on October ribs. Heavy selling by Cudahy and others brought a reaction late.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.—The wheat market here today made a new record, all ket here today made a new record, all options as well as cash selling closing at a good advance over the dollar mark. It was the first time in six years that the prevailing option on wheat sold above $1, and the first time in the history of the exchange that sales at more than $1 a bushel were made in three options in the same season. In addition to this, cash wheat sold at $1.05. Traders hardly dared to do anything until the opening figures from Chicago were known. This gave them a cue and the trading began. December, the principal option, which closed at $71% on the previous day, opened 2% cents higher, advanced % more, declined 1½ cents, and subsequently advanced 2% cents closing at $1.02%, the top. September opened at $1, an advance of 3 cents while the first deal in May was at $1.03. September, after fluctuating, advanced to $1.02%, the top figure, and closing price. AN ADVANCE OF FIVE CENTS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—In wheat the buils added about 5 cents to the dollar mark attained yesterday, and are now out hot foot for $1.25 per bushel in the New York market. Today's opening was one of the most exciting of the entire week. Members and others who had not been seen in down town circles in years, flocked to the floor and gallery to watch the sensational developments in wheat. At the first stroke of the gong, September swung up to $1.02, selling also down to $1.014 at the same instant in other parts of the house. The crowd of buyers fought vigorously among themselves to get possession of the few lots offering, and quietly bid the price up to $1.03½ by rapid strides of ½ or more at a clip. The bears were nowhere. It was a feverish clamor for wheat from all sources. Eleventh hour buils, those who never come in to buy until prices have already had a big advance, were particularly prominent in the early dealings. Deto buy until prices have already had a big advance, were particularly prominent in the early dealings. December opened from $1.00 to $1.00%, and went flying after September, impelled by mad rushes and general bull excitement. It soon reached $1.02%, and then in common with the rest of the list cooled off a bit, both in trading activity and upward movement. For a time the whole market rested, like some huge monster taking breath after a fray. But towards midday the restless energy of the bulls started prices climbing up once more. Just before the close September reached $1.05%, easing off later to $1.05%, which was the official closing figure. During the next hour on the curb, pandemonium again broke loose, for the wires announced "dollar" wheat at Chicago. A cheer, almost as hearty as that which greeted the similar event here yesterday, followed up from the pit, and the bulls shook the market to its foundation with their demands for more wheat, forcing September still higher, to $1.06%. It was a feverish day, giving promise of sensational markets in the future. While there were several points in the news today which under ordinary circumstances might have given the bears a foothold, they had no influence in view of the overpowering bull sentiment among the traders. Cables from Liverpool came 3 to 3%d higher than last night, but foreign—houses sold as much as they bought. There were no improvement export transactions, and the spring wheat outlook was made brighter by sunshine and warm weather. Cash wheat, No. 1 northern, f. o. b., afloat, closed nominally at $1.13. Total sales of futures were 4,570,000 bushels. Exports of wheat and flour, $1.000,000 bushels more during the week at New York and outports. Closing figures on wheat futures today were about 42 cents higher than last year, and spot wheat about 58 cents higher. BIG ADVANCE ON THE COAST. SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—The Cosed Friday at 93 cents, opened today a 57-where from 97 to 98, and kept plunging around wildly for an hour between the figures and 98½. December was equally erratic, opening at 986274, and advance of about 4½, and flactuated between that price and 97½. Enormous quantities were sold at those figures by scople who have previously bought stillons of bushels. PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—There was intense excitement in the wheat market this morning when September wheat in Chicago came over the wires at 98 cents. Crowds gathered in from of the blackboards and yelled them of the blackboards and yelled them-selves hoarse. There were numerous orders here for cargoes and parcel lots at last night's closing pice, but it was impossible to do business to any ex-tent at the advance, although about 10,000 bushels changed hands on a basis of 16.5% for No. 2 red. a net gain over of $1.05% for No. 2 red, a net gain over yesterday of 3%. At this writing the market is still higher, $1.08 being bid here for No. 2 red, which is 6 cents above the close yesterday, and the highest reached in over six years. KANSAS CITY MARKET. KANSAS CITY, Aug. 21.—Wheat has sold from 92 to 98, closing at the top price, 6 cents higher than yesterday Soft sold at $1 and $1.01, or 2 to 3 cent above yesterday's highest prices. Corr was about 2 cents higher, following

BRITISHERS EXCITED.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The fact that the price of wheat has reached $1 a bushel in the United States has produced considerable excitement among grain speculators and others in London. The secretary of the Baltic says: "Of course we have been caught largely short. The rise in the price of wheat, with the uncertainties of the future, make a somewhat hysterical market. The rise of sixpence in the price of barley, for example, was due to no assignable cause. There is no speculation nere, though there is some speculation at Liverpool."

The secretary of the Corn Exchange sauch transactions are generally known. There has been a disposition on the part of the outside public to bear the market, but the brokers have dissuaded their clients from so doing. The rise in prices yesterday morning and to day was not due so much to dollar-wheat as to the buying by France where the harvests are proving disappointing. The millers are short.

But if President Mc-Kinley's supporters are wise, they will not for a moment imagine that when they dispose of the silver craze they will dispose of the revolt against the American capitalists, who have never used their power so ruthlessly as since the last election."

The Westminster Gazette then proceeds to denounce the "extortions of the new United States tariff, which it adds is one of the most fruitless sources of corruption of public men and public servants."

In conclusion the Gazette says: "The degree of success which has attended Bryan shows that the Americans are becoming alive to the rottenness of something, and next time the campaign will be directed less to the gold interfaced than to the standard of public life."

PROF. KELTIE'S VIEWS TORONTO (Ont.,) Aug. 21.—J. Scott Keltie, the president of the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain, is perhaps the best authority on exploration in the world, so that some importance will naturally attach to an interview with him as to the fate of Andree and his balloon. Keltle characterized as all rot the statement that Andree's balloon had been seen in the White Sca, as it would not have been likely to take that direction. As to the reports that Andree's pigeons had been found it was impossible to say whether or not they were Andree's. The Germans are flying pigeons from the English coast to their own country, and the pigeons found might have been German birds. Adree had said before he started that he might not be heard from for two years. He was personally ac-quainted with Andree and with Nanquainted with Andree and with Nan-sen. They were two men vew much alike. Andree was a fine, intelligent fellow of magnificent physique. He was perfectly well aware of what he was doing when he undertook the trip to the North Pole, and if pluck, in-telligence and physique could help a man through such an undertaking he telligence and physique could help a man through such an undertaking he would yet be heard from. It might be that his balloon would come down on the northern coast of Alaska, in which case it would take considerable time for him to reach a telegraph station. Then it might descend in Siberia or Greenland and some time must elapse in any case before he would be elapse in any case before he would be

Mr. Keltie would not venture an ppinion as to what effect very cold at-mosphere, such as would be encounmosphere, such as would be encoun-tered in the polar regions, would have on Andree's balloon. He appears to be of the opinoin that Andree has been successful in crossing the North Pole and to believe that he will be heard

Great Trotting Event at Chico-Gras Valley and Eastern Races-Baseball Games—Jimmy Michael Beats Starbuck.

AT CHARTER OAK.

TRY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE. CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Those who went to the Washington Park course this afternoon, and there were some fifteen thousand of them, saw the fastest first heat ever paced, and probably the fastest fourth quarter. The conditions were good for fast time. The track was springy and fast and the weather was warm, but during the earlier part of the afternoon there was quite a little breeze which the pacers had to breast through the half-mile of the back stretch

The chief event on the card was the match race between Joe Patchen, with a record of 2:01½, and Star Pointer, record 2:01¾. The con-

Pointer, record 2:01½, and Star Pointer, record 2:01½. The conditions were that they should pace three heats and to have the inside position alternately. The toss of a coin gave Patchen the pole the first and third heats. Notwithstanding this advantage and the fact that he had a quarter of a second the better of his opponent in the matter of records, the race demonstrated that Star Pointer was too fast for him, at least on this occasion, for the latter won all three heats handlly, outfooting the black horse.

For the first heat, they were given the word and went away well together. Around the first turn Patchen secured a lead of a length. The first quarter was covered in thirty and a half seconds, a 2:02 gait, which proved to be the rating for the heat. Turning into the far side they faced the wind, but Pointer began to move up, lapping his antagonist, and the pace was increased, the half being done in 2:00, or 29½ seconds for the second quarter, a 1:58 gait. Then the wind and the terrific pace began to tell on them, and the timers caught them at the three-quarters post in 1:32½, a 2:01 gait for the third quarter. At this point Pointer, traveling on the outside, had fallen an open length behind Patchen. Swinging into the stretch, McCleary called on the bay horse, and he responded gamely with one of the greatest bursts of speed ever seen on a trotting track. Steadily, inch by inch, he crept up on the black stallion. Curry shook up his horse, lifted bim and laid the lash with stinging emphasis on his flank. He responded mobily and let out another link, pacing without a waver, like a piece of well-balanced machinery. But, go ever so fast, he could not shake off the big bay. Inch by inch Pointer crept up on him. Now the cry was "Patchen wins," as they neared the wire, but it was only in the last half dozen strides, and only by a nose.

The time for the mile was 2:02, and a fast heat record was marked up. This made the time for the last quarter in about 0:29, or at a 1:56 gait, which was probably never before equall n that heat. When they were given the word when they were given the word they went away at evens, but Pointer was never headed, and won at will by two open lengths, in 2:04%. The first quarter was covered in 0:30, the half in 1:00% and the three-quarters in 1:32½.

The third heat was a repetition of the second, and was done in 2:04. The first quarter was covered in 0:30½, the half in 1:02, the three-quarters in 1:33½.

It took four heats to decide the 2:11 pacing event, Lady Nottingham taking three of those. Tutty Wilkes was second and Doc Archibald third. Best ANOTHER MATCH ARRANGED.

Jimmy Michael Defeats Frank Starbuck With Ease.

NEW YORK Aug. 21.—Jimmy Mi-hael, the Welsh bicycle rider, easily chael, the Welsh bicycle rider, easily defeated Frank Starbuck of Philadel phia in a thirty-three-mile race at the Manhattan Beach track today. Al-though Michael had a poor set of ma-chines for pacemaking, his pluck and stamma stood him in good stead and he finished the contest in 66½m., fully two miles ahead of the American. The attendance was 12,000, Both men were in perfect condition. A good deal of money changed mands on the result, but the admirers of the foreigner had laid odds on their candidate and many bets were made in favor of Michael at 100 to 80 and 100 to 70. stamina stood him in good stead favor of Michael at 100 to 80 and 100 to 70.

Each contestant had thirty-two pacemakers, and in this respect Starbuck had the call. Both went off from a standing start, and each picked up triplet pacemakers. Starbuck got the pole, but in the second lap Michael picked up a sextet and assumed the lead. At the end of the second mile the little Welshman was a hundred yards ahead and at the end of the third mile he was 400 yards ahead. From this point to the end of the race Michael had a very decided advantage and had soon gained a lap on his rival. Then for five or six miles both men alternated in the lead, although there was a lap to Michael's credit, but the little fellow when picked up by his favorite quad or sextet, was enough in reserve to assert his superiority over Starbuck and passed him at will.

The fifteenth mile was ridden in the fast time of 1:52. The slowest mile was the thirty-third by

The fifteenth mile was ridden in the fast time of 1:52. The slowest mile was the thirty-third, but this could be easily accounted for through the fact that Michael was nearly seven laps ahead and took things easy, covering the last mile in 2:12 4-5. From the fifteenth mile to the end of the race Michael beat every standing record previously established in a contest. Michael's wheel was geared to 106 and Starbuck's to 96.

MONEY TO LOAN-

LENDERS OF MONEY ON REAL ESTATE security desire to know not only that the mortgageor owns a perfect title, but also that the mortgage is properly executed and is a valid lien on the property. Every MORTGAGEE'S GUARANTEE POLICY of title insurance issued by the TITLE INSURANCE AND TRUST COMPANY, corner Franklin and New High sts. contains the following clause: ". the Title Insurance and Trust Company does hereby insure . the mortgage named in a certain mortgage hereinafter described . against any loss of the principal or interest or other sums secured by said mortgage, which the said insured shall sustain by reason of any defect in the execution of said mortgage, or by reason of any defect in, or lien or incumbrance on the title of the mortgageor. "There is no method of obtaining such a guarantee except in a policy of title insurance.

PERSONAL—WHAT DO YOU KNOW about the "Klondyker" Practically nothing. Yet there is no one place on the earth's surface so much talked of and sought after at the present time. No sooner is a want created in these days than it is promptly met. This has been done by the publication of a valuable and authentic "Guide to the Klondyke Gold Fields." At the popular price of 25 cents has been issued the most comprehensive guide one could possibly desire. There is no information of any value that it does not contain. With eight official maps of great value and thirty-two full-page photographic reproductions, the work is absolutely indispensable. To attain the height of folly, go without it. THOMAS L. CHAPIN,

Notary Public in and for the County of Los Angeles, State of California.

NOTE.—THE TIMES is a seven-day paper. The above aggregate, viz., 132,370 copies, issued by us during the seven days of the past week, would, if apportioned on the basis of a six-day evening paper, give a daily average circulation for each week-day of 22,060 concles.

THE TIMES is the only Los Angeles paper which has regularly published sworn statements of its circulation, both gross and net, weekly, monthly and yearly during the past several years. Advertisers seeks their business, and this THE TIMES gives them correctly, from guarantees that the circulation of THE TIMES regularly exceeds the combined circulation of all other Los Angeles daily newspapers. PEACE OF EUROPE.

CONSTANTLY MENACED BY THE GRECIAN QUESTION.

Tranquillity Will not Be Restored Until the Turkish Army is Disbanded.

LORD SALISBURY'S PROPOSALS

CONTINENTAL POWERS NOT DIS POSED TO ACCEPT THEM.

India Passed-Successful Experi-ments With the Lynchronograph-London Gossip.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—[Copyright, 1897, by the Associated Press.] The Marquis of Salisbury's definite committal of Great Britain to the policy of insisting upon the evacuation of Thessaly by the Turkish troops, whether the Greek idemnity is paid or unpaid, is univer sally approved by the press, and is equally condemned by the continental newspapers. It is difficult to foresee newspapers. It is difficult to foresee the outcome. The British Premier pro-posed that Greece should pay a small sum annually, representing the inter-est on the indemnity, and an installest on the indemnity, and an installment on the total amount, as in the case of the Turko-Russian indemnity; but there seems to be little chance of the powers accepting the propositions. The great grip of the Marquis of Salisbury on the powers is found in the latter's intense desire to get peace settled, and the Turkish army disbanded, as until this last step is accomplished the peace of Europe will be continually menaced. It is suggested that Great Britain may abandon the concert of the powers. This is probable and will be regarded as proof of bad faith, and would throw the powers into a violent and dangerous ferment, because, rightly or wrongly, it is universally believed that Great Britain is bent on treachery.

that Great Britain is bent on treachery.

The crisis in affairs on the frontier of British India seems to have passed and there is no doubt there has been genuine cause for the scare which prevailed. Practically all the tribes throughout a mountain district 800 miles long and 200 miles deep are in arms, and, though their reverses will probably cool their ardor and prevent further serious fighting at present, the greatest care will be required in order to restore peace and order. The speedy nipping in the bud of this dangerous insubjection has demonstrated the spiendid state of preparation to which the British army in India has beene brought. Within a few days fully equipped forces of 37,000 men of all arms was hurried to the front without a hitch.

Lieut. Squire of the Artillery School at Fortress Monroe, and Prof. Crehore of Dartmouth, have made some remarkabe demonstration during the past week of the possibilities of their synchronograph. The government telegraph officials gave these men the use of the line 860 miles long, making a circuit through London, Leeds. Glasgow, Edinburgh, Newcastle, York and other places over which the Americans succeeded in transmitting short messages at a speed equivalent to 4000 words a minute. The messages were received with perfect clearness. Forty-four miles of the line were underground, thus adding to the difficulty of the trial. The highest rate attained by them in America was 3000 words per minute over an iron wire thirteen miles long. The inventors claim that the trial demonstrates the possibility of sending press messages between New York and chicago at such speed that the contents of a newspaper could be transmitted in an hour.

The enthusiastic reception which the Duke and Duchess of York have met with in Dublin, is said to have greatly disappointed the Irish Nationalists. The visit has been managed with excellent tact, in marked contrast to the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Ireland, when it was sought to make party capital out of the event. At Dublin the reception of the Duke and Duchess was made heartier than at Kingstown, where the royal party landed and more general than anticipated by even the most enthusiastic.

The enthusiasm increased as the royal party proceeded from the railroad station through the streets, and the occupants of the steps of the City ria.

This, however, they only did on condition that the Prince join the district staff of Bombay, where the conduct of the Prince has been most exemplary.

The heir recently born to the Earl of Craven, whose wife was formerly Miss Cornella Martin, only daughter of Bradley Martin, of New York, promises to make a great financial difference to the Earl, whose estates are extrasive, but heavily encumbered and not very valuable. The first real effort of horseless vehicles in London was made on Thursday, when a company placed a dozen electrical cabs on the streets. They resemble coupes and the accumulators consist of forty cells capable of propelling over fifty miles at a cost of 50 cents. The rear wheels do the driving and the front wheels do the steering. They have heavy rubber tires, have upholstered spring cushions, are lighted by electricity, are speedy and almost noiseless. They appear to be giving every satisfaction. The machines seem under perfect control and threads their way wonderfully through the traffic. The tariff is the same as that of the cab.

Lifting his glass His Majesty said: "I trust that all misunderstandings are now buried." This is generally interpreted as referring to recent events and to the Austrian jealousy created thereby.

During the presence of the King of Italy at the German military manoeuvers, a symbolical play, written according to the instructions and on an outline furnished by Emperor William, will be performed at the Royal Theater at Weisbaden. The play will allegorically represent the fraternization of Italy and Germany. The two leading roles are Italia and Germania, and the scenic decorations, which are gorseous, are the work of tions, which are gorgeous, are the work of the Viennessse painters, Kaktzeky and Ro tenara, from sketches made by the German Emperor. The Associated Press correspondent learns on good authority that it is true, that Emperor William has proposed a new plan of concerted action on the part of the continental powers against Anarchists, and that he has obtained the promise of cooperation from a majority of them. The plan includes a uniform system of watching all these who are known to hold destructive ideas, a more effective interchange of observation and a better system of identification.

HISTORY BEING MADE IN THE SANDWICH ISLANDS

The Labor Question is of Great Im-Annexation.

ADVANCEMENT OF THE JAPS.

THEIR PRESENCE IS A MENACE TO THE GOVERNMENT.

nnevation Sentiment Increased by migration Stopped.

HONOLULU, Aug. 5.-Events of imfuture of labor in these islands, more it generally, it is necessary to consider the present system. As has been repeated, there are now say 60,000 coolies at work here in different capacities, from the field laborer to the trusted cashier in some of the largest mercantile houses.

The advancement made by the Japa-nese class in the past two years is nothing short of wonderful, and easily bears out the theory that they came as students, not owners, though in pos-session of the $50 necessary to their landing. I am informed on eminen authority—a person no less than the head of one of the great island con-cerns—that he found that four Jap servants in his home were students; that it seemed that they worked more as a pretense than as a necessity, and the knowledge of this fact changed the politics of himself and his busiassociates from royalists to annexationists.

The annexation question seems to hinge on the fact that even if we really preferred to see this government left to its own resources, we yet could not see that government domniated and overthrown, and in the end con-fiscated by Japan. This is the pivotal the sentiment points to the question of the attempted control by the Japs, not as a theory, nor yet as a bug-bear to create favorable sentiment in the United States, but as an actual attempt that may yet succeed. Three years ago there were many firms, many Britons and many natives who were bitter in their opposition, but are now just as firmly in favor of annexation and this sentiment has been created by the realization that their business is being undermined and their personnel impaired by the steady improve-ment of the Japs.

In the main streets of this beautiful

In the main streets of this beautiful city their stores stand side by side with those of Americans. On the side streets, with a stock of cheaper goods they cater to the next class of buyers, and on corners and by-ways they work for any who may need them. Strawhat factory work is carried on, and always successfully, with no need for fire nor assignments to excuse a clearance sale. Tailors will take a garment which they have never cut before, and which they have never cut before, and will duplicate its best points, and more than that, they do not need a garment for a pattern the second time. One Jap with a boy assistant, two sewing ma-chines, and a stock of crepe, draws the trade of many of the best class of the trade of many of the best class of whites needing shirts, and does a thriving business. It is not necessary for him to carry a bg stock, for just across the way is a store, conducted by a friend and countryman of his, who will supply him in small lots as may be required. I took a shirt to him which had, to him, three new points as applied to crepe shirts, i.e., collar and cuffs attached, bosom stiff when laundered, and open all the way in front. He turned me out a dozen in in front. He turned me out a dozen in three days' time, at less than $1 each, and they are perfect. They make a pair of white "tennis" shoes at $1 per pair, and the same shoes exactly are sold by the haberdasheries at $2.50 to $4. And the only claim the latter can make to cover the difference in cost is that the cheap shoes are made by Chinese and Japanese and "will not hold their shape." They make shoes for the horses as well as for the masters, and I stood for some time watching the process, for it was new to me, and they are in all the trades from watchmaking to carpentering, and in all the professions also. In one place I passed a stone yard, and I noticed through a door that had been cut in a high board fence, a small alcove formed by the way in which the blocks of stone had been piled. In this alcove, facing the doorway, sat a man making shoes, but he was of the poorer class, being unable to afford a store or clerks or stock beyond the old shoes he repaired. In one of the big wholesale drug houses, a Jap controls the books, and they say he is one of the shrewdest, brightest men who ever handled a cashier's pen. He speaks several languages, as do a great many of the little fellows, and is very valuable to his employers. These are only instances (not exceptions) which I mention, to show you how the class is making advances, and why they are feared by the Anglo-Saxons here. It is galling to feel and to see that the white trader cannot hold his own, but is being steadily and surely supplanted by them.

That the islanders realize their position in this matter, or else because they wish to show their patriotism in making this really American soil, is shown by the most recent development of plans for colonizing the work of the soil, that is, in the cane and rice fields and on the coffee and cotton plantations. The utmost care has been taken to preserve secrecy in the movement for various reasons. First, the promoters have been afraid that by bringing the Southern darky here, they would at once antagonize other l be very unwise to come to these islands with no capital or chance and with no capital or the chance and with the chance of all thinds of labor is overstocked, and the many steamships arriving at this port bring numbers of people who are obliged to return disappointed. In this state of affairs as outlined there is, however, one solution which and there is, however, one solution which and there is, however, one solution which and the put it briefly, it demonstrates their willingness to meet our own government half way when they take readily to the plan of fostering the immigration of the negro from the plantations of the South of its plantations have these contract laborers, whose three-year terms are continually expiring, and they will be gradually replaced by our own citizens, and it is therefore only a question of time here which, with the franchise, would be a danger to republican institutions, will be replaced by citizens with some Christianity, some knowledge of printed matter and a loyality that is unsurpassed by any Yankee of them all. Will do much 'toward Americanizing this group of islands cannot be questioned. It is with no misglvings from a humanitarian sense that we look forward to it, for while there are infinite advantages in it for the plantation with many serious abuses now connected with the coolle contract-labor system. There is to be a match race between Tracy Hall, now head bookkeeper for the Security Savings Bank, but at one time regarded as the best handleap man on the Coast, and Tom Mackler. The distance will be a quarter of a mile, best two out of three for a stake of $25. Fritz Lacy will try for the mile record, paced with a triplet and two tandems to follow, He will be led the last quarter by Harry Cromwell and S. G. Spier, Charles Stimson will also try for the quarter mile record, paced by a tandem.

Artie Bell will see what he can do with the two mile record.

These three riders have arranged for a mile race September 9. Each will put up $50 and in addition to the money which is to be won there is a keen rivarly between these men, and this race is expected to establish the supremacy.

IBY ASSOCIATED PRESS WIRE.1

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—H. J. Hanchette, at one time secretary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, who so mysteriously disappeared four years ago while at Chicago, and was thought to be dead, is now reported to be alive and well in that city. He was recently seen by Robert J. Farrell, a Los Angeles newspaper man.

[The foregoing dispatch would be startling if true, but the trouble is that Farrell's reputation for veracity is such in Los Angeles that no credence is placed in his oft-proclaimed discovery of the missing secretary. Farrell was employed as advertising solicitor by the Los Angeles Herald when Hanchett was city editor of that paper, and it has been Farrell's boast ever since Mr. Hanchett's mysterious disappearance six years ago, that he knows where he is, but as yet he has furnished no proof of his assertions. About once a year Farrell breaks into print about his discovery of the missing secretary, but his story has ceased to interest Hanchett's family or friends. Farrell and U. S. Grant Glick, a notorious swindler, are the only two persons who have ever professed any knowledge of Hanchett's whereabouts, but it would be hard to find any one hereabouts so credulous as to place any confidence in their statements.]

The "Surf-line Flyer."

[Anglo-Californian, London, August, 1897:] With the establishment of the special Sunday train service of the Los Angeles Times between Los Angeles and San Diego, residents are given one more train for the north than they have heretofore had on Sundays. The train that brings The Times to San Diego on Sunday mornings is a special, paid for by The Times, upon which no passengers or other papers are carried. It goes back to Los Angeles in the afternoon as a regular train, doing the regular business of the road, with the exception of carrying mail. Thus San Diego not only gets The Times the same day it is published—early in the morning—but the residents of the city and bay region get an afternoon train service to the north which they would not get if it were not for the establishment of The Times "Surf-line Flyer."

in the United States, or perhaps in the world where so large a proportion of the visitors live under canvas as in Avalon the pretty little metropolis of Catalina Island. It is a safe estimate to say that two-thirds of the three or four thousand people now on the island are living in cloth houses or tents.

Tent life in Avalon differs materially from the style of camping that prevails along the beach, and to some extent along the streets, in Santa Monica, Redondo and Long Beach and other seaside resorts of Southern California. At considerable amount of money has been expended in furnishing these tents with furniture, rugs and bric-a-brac. Some of the tents are partially cevered by creepers, such as nasturtiums, Maderia vines, citron or even tomato plants, which not only improves their appearance, but adds additional shade. For an hour or two in the middle of the day these cloth houses become semewhat warm, for which reason many campers have added an extra covering, or "fly," to the tent.

One enterprising tent manufacturer of Los Angeles has quite an extensive villager of these cloth houses, with accommodations for five or six hundred persons. Tents may be rented by the day, week or month, either furnished cr unfurnished, and with or without floors. The furnished tents contain everything that is needed for light housekeeping, including cook stoves and, utensils, or household articles of exercising every morning to supply clean bed linen and towels, and the tents are releaned regularly, if the campers so desire. No charge is made by the Banning Company to campers for the cleaning and sprinkling of the streets.

One of the leading hotels of the island has an annex, containing several scores of small cloth houses, which are occupied by guests of the hotel when the rooms are crowded.

This camp life is not only inexpensive, but it affords visitors more liberty than they canfind in a hotel. They may bring their own bathing suits, and walk direct from their tents into the water. The question of eating has been solved in a most satisfactory manner, by the opening of several first-class delicacy stores, where every variety of cooked food; hot of cold, may be purchased in small or large quantities, at very reasonable prices. Most of the campers avail themselves of this labor-saying system, and little cooking is done in the tents.

Much insensity is displayed by many.

AND MRS, J. H. F. PECK gave a chamingly informal din-ner last week, at which the A. H. Braly, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hines, Maj. and Mrs. J. K. Duncan, the Misses Helen Fairchild and Helen Prentiss. Mr. Trefethern of San Francisco and Charles Dick. The table was effectively decorated with La France roses, plumbago and knots of pink satin ribbon.

Maj. and Mrs. W. G. Wedenberg gave an informal luncheon Thursday, in honor of Col. and Mrs. J. G. Chand-ler. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice, Mrs. A. F. M. Strong, Mrs. J. T. Griffith and Miss Maurice. The table was very prettily decorated with a profusion of purple and white with a protest double petunias.

One of the pleasantest affairs of the week was the informal "at home" given Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mullen, to meet Dr. and Mrs. Cotter of Yuma, Ariz., Mr. and Miss Cotter of Plattesburg, N. Y., and the Misses McKenzie of San José. The Misses McKenzie of San José. The Misses Mullen assisted in extending the charming hospitality for which the Mullen residence is noted. The rooms throughout were fragrant with masses of flowers, relieved by vines and foliage. A delightful musical programme was rendered, to which Mrs. Katherine Kimball Forest contributed solos and with J. J. Schallert, several duets, while Miss Bernice Roche gave several fine plano solos. A special feature of the evening was a new game, "The Author's Maze," at which Mrs. Forest won the lady's prize, a Wedgewood cream pitcher, and Mr. Cailender, the gentleman's, a book. A supper followed, for which Reynolds catered. Those present besides the guests, of honor were:

Mesdames—

TO SILENCE GOSSIP.

GRIFFITH PUTS AN EXPERT WORK ON HIS BOOKS.

Secretary, R. A. Bird, Induced Griffith to Investigate-Bird Denies That There is Any Founda-tion for the Story.

An expert is working on the books of he capitalist, Griffith J. Griffith, and R. A. Bird, who for about five years has been his secretary, has been discharged.

This state of affairs does not necessarily imply that Bird has done anywith his name for two days past. The rumor which gained the widest circulation, and the one which reached the ears of G. J. Griffith, was to the effect that Bird had attempted to commit suicide at a roadhouse, but had been prevented from taking his life and had said he made the attempt because of financial difficulties with Griffith. That this rumor was untrue is now known. It was stated last night that the expert working on G. J. Griffith's books had already found a shortage of $800, and was not anywhere near through his work. Mr. Griffith was seen in relation to the matter and said:

"It is true that I have discharged Mr. Bird from my employ, and it is also true that I have an expert on his books, but I deny that so far we have found any shortage that would justify the sensational rumors afloat. I am doing a large business, which runs not the with his name for two days past. Th also true that I have an expert on his books, but I deny that so far we have found any shortage that would justify the sensational rumors afloat. I am doing a large business, which runs not in the hundreds or thousands, but I have such a check on my business that it would be absolutely impossible for Mr. Bird or any other man whom I might trust to take any large sum. The rumor that Bird has taken $10,000 is absolute nonsense. He may have taken some little money, but it would amount to nothing so far as a business like mine is concerned. In fact had it been possible and had Bird taken $10,000 I wouldn't have lost any sleep over it.

"Why dfd I discharge him and why am I having my books experted? Well, I'll tell you why: To silence idle gossip. I heard of Mr. Bird's escapades and his conduct did not please me. I examined his books and found he had been negligent and had not posted them. I sent for an expert at once to go through the books and straighten them out. I knew all about Bird's past record when I employed him, but I wanted a man competent to take care of details after I had done the read work. Bird was such a man. I employed him and he has served me faithfully until recently. You can readily understand that a man who is making a trade which involves say $100,000, has no time for the minutiae of the business. All he wants is a system to protect every doilar of his cash except the small amount. That is possible, and I will not know exactly how his cash on hand should stand until the expert has finished."

R. A. Bird was found playing a game of cards in a basement saloon on Spring street last night, and was told of the rumors. He manifested the greatest surprise, denied that he had tried to commit suicide, denied that he was short in his accounts, and finally said that if he had been discharged by G. J. Griffiths he was not had tried to commit suicide, denied that he was short in his accounts, and finally said that if he had been discharged by G. J. Griffiths he was not aware of the fact.

This latter statement, in the face of Mr. Griffith's positive declaration that he had discharged him, led to the question as to whether Bird knew there was an expert at work on his books.

"If there is, I don't know it," he said. "I was at the office as usual today, and I know of no expert. Yes, it is true that I hold other positions than that of G. J. Griffith's private secretary. I am secretary of several companies of which he is the president. I was, of course, appointed through his influence. But it makes no difference whether there is an expert at work on the books or not. I am not short in my cash."

To Ladies.

Nowadays the market is so overcrowded with an endless variety of nostrums in the line of beautifiers and toilet articles, that women who truly desire to cultivate and maintain a 'healthful', refined complexion, are at a loss to know what is safe and beneficial to use. Mr. Frank Noubauer, of the Imperial Hair Bazaar, 234-226 West Second Street, has been fortunate in securing the sole agency for Creme de Acacia, which is a product of vegetable pith absolutely free from animal properties or drugs, but whose peculiar virtues are based in the tonle and hygenic action of OXYGEN, which it imparts to the skin in massaging. It imparts to the skin in massaging, it purges impurities, such as excessive and offensive perspiration, oillness, black-heads, tetter, etc., and gives tone to dry, wrinkled skin. At the same time it is nutritive and highly emollient, which specially recommends its use in the nursery for infants in cases of prickly heat and after the bath to equalize the circulation. Altogether considered, Creme de Acacia is unique and entirely different in all respects to any other toilet cream ever sold here, as any lady will readily discover, and as a neat, clean, dainty and effective creamy cream, it stands unrivalled, and true to the 'test and therefore can be heartly recommended.

ES! There's no tellin' by appearances," said the man who rowed me up the lake from Old Forge in the Adirondacks to my destination.

"When we was comin' down here stated that old gentleman cleaning up brush. It must be hard work bendin' over, he is so fat." That's Benjamin Harrison, ex-President of the United States, says I."

The ex-President is working on the grounds of his new summer home with all the zeal of a pioneer who has a growing family to provide for. His beard is white, but he is young in heart. An air of geniality and of cheeriness pervades the Harrison cottage which would surprise politicians who have memories of the temperature in the White House during his administration.

TALKS OF HIS MOUNTAIN HOME. "There's no deer shooting now," said the ex-President as he puts his hands There's no deer shooting how, said the ex-President as he puts his hands on his hips, drawing the deep breath and taking the restful position of a workman who has a moment's leisure, "and it's pretty hot to fish in the day-time. So I am just clearing up the front of my new place a bit. There is a lot of work to do before we get into good shape. It's rather hard to make a lawn where this underbrush is. We cit it down and root it up pretty thoroughly one year, and when we come back the next it has grown up again in the most audacious manner.

"We're also ripping out some of the stumps left from the cutting of the trees when we first built our cottage. Then this spot was nothing more than a batch of forest—a good place for the deer to come down to the water to drink. We had a great deal of pleasure in selecting the trees which we are to leave for shade, both as to individual

KILLS DEER FOR VENISON. The new law which prevents the "hounding" of deer, the luring of them to a certain spot with salt; or attracting them with a "jack light," is a disappointment to Mr. Harrison, who will now have to hunt the deer, in-stead of having the deer brought to him. Formerly his guides and their dogs hounded the deer into the water. dogs hounded the deer into the water, where they were kept swimming until the ex-President from the bow of his boat dispatched them. Or else at night he was rowed along the shores with a light in the bow of the boat. Often in this way the prey was brought within two or three yards of the muzzle of the rifle. As the guides say, "you can almost reach out and touch them." Both "hounding" and "jacklighting" are scarcely considered sport by American sportsmen. What Mr. Harrison desires more than anything else is the venison for his table, it is said, and he sees no more cruelty in getting it in one way than in another.

The people of Buzzard's Bay and vicinity have come to look upon Mr.

Cleveland as an old story. They don't dislike him; they look upon him as a disherman who minds his own business. FRATERNITY AMONG FISHER-MEN.

The fishermen like him best. He sur-

MEN.

The fishermen like him best. He surprised them long ago by offering some of his own stock to a fisherman who was about to return home because he had run out of bait. Now he never wants for bait himself. Usually he says "Good morning" to any professional, hard-handed old fisherman hepasses, though never to a soft-handed fisherman from up Boston way. He tells the professional fisherman if "they're biting well" where he is, and the professional returns his kindness. There exists a professional self-respect between them, and the fishermen say that they can give him no pointers in their art. Indeed, they assert that he could easily earn his bread and butter as a professional himself.

The residents tell how in the early days of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland at Buzzard's Bay, Mrs. Cleveland at Buzzard's Bay, Mrs. Cleveland used to pick up poor children in the street and take them home to a fine dinner, and new clothes, and a little present when she sent them away. Mrs. Cleveland has children of their own now. Her neighbors scarcely ever see her passing in a carriage. It is said that the Clevelands are the quietest family about the bay; Mr. Cleveland keeps to his fishing and his wife to Gray Gables. In the evening or the early morning she and her children often go out for a ride on the naphtha launch which lies near the little landing platform.

MR. BENEDICT'S OFFER.

Mr. Benedict's palatial yatch, the Oneida, is anchored a deal of the time as near to Gray Gables as her draught will permit. Mr. Cleveland often goes on board for dinner. Mr. Benedict has offered to carry his friend around the world on the Oneida, but the Parthenon, the Collseum, and the Pyramids probably would not interest him as much as his favorite fishing in Buzzard's Bay. His distaste of exercise has not decreased; vigorous man though he is, he does not seem to need it. His health is better than it has been for many years, but he still has a pang now and then from his gouty foot, as he makes that long walk of two rods from his porch to his boat.

Indeed Buzzard's Bayites say out and out that Mr. Cleveland is "awful lazy." He leads the life of an English squire, without the squire's riding and driving. If he is working at his autobiography, as has been hinted, he is not working hard. He has simply settled down to the summer occupation he likes best, that of "laying 'Found an' fishin."

FLORENCE CRITTENTON HOME.

It is pleasant to note, among other features of its advancement, the rapid strides that Los Angeles is making along philanthropic lines. Perhaps no other city of its size in the country other city of its size in the country has given expression to its philanthropy in a larger number of well-sustained benevolent institutions than has Los Angeles. The sentiment of the community has been voiced in the continual multiplication of institutions that do credit to its humanity and thoughtfulness for the needy and erring.

thoughtfulness for the needy and erring.

Christian civilization, in the truest sense, is a thing of benevolent action, and not a mere embodiment of theories and creeds. Actual need, wherever it exists, appeals to it, and is taken into its comprehensive clasp.

The history of the movement in our city to establish a home for fallen girls is an interesting one, and the outcome is altogether encouraging, although the need of more generous aid is just now apparent.

though the need of more generous aid is just now apparent.

Looking backward some years we find that the first decided movement toward establishing a home for fallen women was made by Mrs. Watson, who began to seek out and take into her own home those of this character whom she could reach and influence for good. She did what she could in this line, but as the years went by she changed her line of effort, and by interesting such men as Messrs. Slauson and Lacy, and other men of means and and Lacy, and other men of means and generous impulses, she converted her home into one for the children of poor dence of their fall might not be known to them.

About this time, 1892, Rev. William C. Stevens and his lovely wife owned a pleasant home in this city. Christianity was a practical every-day thing with them, and their hearts went out to the poor girls who had been led astray, and taken the first downward astep toward a life of shame. They were not content with simply giving them their sympathy, but they gave their home also, and later it was dedicated under the name of the Florence Crittenton Home, as a shelter and a home in the largest sense of the word, for in the largest sense of the word, for

EX.PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.
There has been little change at Gray Gables, Buzzard's Bay. It is not more accessible; reporters are not more welcome. Fishing continues to be good. Mr. Cleveland sought a place when he was in office where he could catch fish without being caught by the reporters, and he got it. It must have been the strategical advantages of the particular spot where Gray Gables is located that made him decide in its favor. The reporter was bound to come by the wrong path and suddenly find himself near to Gray Gables, it is true, but with a bay between him and his goal. As Mr. Cleveland was careful to tell any telends whom he wanted to see the right path, the chances were that the person making the error was somebody he didn't want to see.

JEFFERSON AND BENEDICT.
There are no trees around Gray Gables and its owner has planted none. He had rather go without shade and without mosquitoes. Next to Gray Gables is a plot with the grass only partigy grown over it, where Joseph Jefferson had his summer cottage. The ex-President must miss Joe. He liked to hear Joe talk, and when they were together it is estimated that Joe uttered about 100 words to Grover's one. Mrs. Cleveland also missee Mrs. Jefferson. of 'Peliets.' I got well and nave done a great deal of hard work since."

What more need be said of a book after the one statement: "680,000 copies sold at $1.50 each?" That book was Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. In that many homes it is known as the best medical book ever published in any language. Several chapters relate exclusively to diseases peculiar to women. There is now ready an enormous edition that is absolutely FREE. This edition is bound in heavy paper. Send twenty-one one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. If fine French cloth binding is desired, send to cents extra (31 cents in all). Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

YOU

THIS IS ADDRESSED TO you! Have you ever heard of the statement made by one of the most famous men that ever lived which tells of manhod? It is this: "A perfect man is the noblest work of God." That is so true that no matter whom YOU may happen to be, it is worth remembering for all the years that you have to live.

CAN

Can you pick up gold anywhere? Does it grow on bulrushes? Your own sense tells you No! The Klondyke may have all the riches that are told of, but it takes pains to get them. It takes severe toll. Is your health of more value to you than all the riches of Klondyke? If you think not, you will alter your opinion when you have lost it all. Reason today!

Be fair with yourself. All the money on earth would do you no good if you could not use it to satisfy your various ambitions. And what is the highest ambition that you have? If it is not to be a perfect man, you are weak somewhere. Let us suppose that it is. Will you take the trouble to send to the Hudson Medical Institute and ask about it?

A half-score thousand people have testified to the efficacy of the freatment that is to be had there for YOUR style of case. You can have a lot of this testimony—much more than enough to satisfy any fair-minded man, if you will but ask for it. Is that not worth the trouble that it will take? A call, or for that matter, a postal card will do.

MAIN

Manhood is like all other gifts.

It can be dissipated. When it is you can no longer claim that you are "One or the noblest works of God." Is it not better to have all people respect you? Is it not better to be a wound in wind and limb? Is it not better to be a MAN? Ask yourself these things and let your pwn conscience tell you the truth. Try this day!

If you happen to have catarrh, if you suffer from indigestion, if you feel a weak back or have any form of blood taint, you can apply to the doctors with the feeling that they will help yon SWIFTLY, PERIA-NENTLY and SURELY.

ing, does not lack the means for the work that it has to do. Give something, every father and mother who have lovely daughters safe under the shelter of the home-roof from the wiles of the tempter. Give something, every one who respects noble womanhood and who has the memory of a tender mother's cafe. Give something, each one who has known a sister's love and tenderness, as the devotion of a true wife's undying affection. This home needs at once $500. It is a small sum for a city like Los Angeles to raise; it should be easily secured. Why cannot our churches devote one Sabbath day's collection to this cause? Let us all give something, for we are our brother's (sister's) keeper.

"Are you sure you have the list?"
"Quite sure." I shouted back to Sarah

"Are you sure you have the list?"

"Quite sure," I shouted back to Sarah who stood on the front stoop yelling final instructions at me as I walked briskly to the depot to take the early Monday morning train for the city to do a day's bargain shopping.

Once seated in the car, my little niece beside me, who had saved up 39 cents to shop with, too, I looked over my list and counted my money. Twenty-five dollars to spend, with a margin for meat and a return ticket. The list was exact in every detail. Sarah and I had spent all Sunday afterneon over it, had purchased every paper with an advertisement in it, and had carefully marked with blue pencil what we wanted, before we made it out, and had gone over the papers again with a red pencil to mark what was to be inspected. And, if suitable, and the money held out, to be purchased.

Half past nine only when we arrived at the Arcade, and taking a car we sped up to town as fast as electricity could take us.

"I'm so hungry, do let's have another breakfast." pleaded little Isabel, and nothing loth, for my brain was whirling with the thought of the day's work. I turned into a nice, cool restaurant and ordererd, as I thought, a simple meal. The check rather took away my breath, but the meal was eaten and I concluded that we could make up for it by a scant lunch. Then we turned to the shops.

What a bustling and rustling and scrambling to get served first! With my list tight in my hand and Isabel grabbing onto my skirts and stopping every moment to look at something. I finally made my way to the waist counter, and from the third row back managed to catch a glimpse of what I wanted. It seemed ages to wait, but when my turn came I found it hard to decide which I liked best, and settled it by buying two more than I had on my list, thinking I would make up for it by doing without something else. Such pretty muslins I had never seen, and though I did not require them in the least, I just bought themwell, because they were cheap, and I felt sure they would come in handy some time.

I had an insecure feeling that my money was slipping away on things that were not on the list, but there was no quiet place to stop and count, so on we went to the other stores. Isabel tagging at me to know about the basement, where the toys were. It must have been noon when the child's hopes were realized, and she took out her 39 cents to invest in playthings worth four times that amount, and while she priced, I sat down on the steps and looked into my purse. Only $5 left, and not half the things on the list looked at, but I had the shoes and skirts and a dozen small parcels in my shopping bag with half a dozen in arge ones sent on to the depot, and entirely forgetful of lunch or a return ticket, I began a mental layout of the remainder.

"Can't you lend me just 50 cents. Auntie; I'll pay you back, honest, remainder.

"Can't you lend me just 50 cents, Auntie: I'll pay you back, honest, when I save up?"

The child had a pretty doll in her arms, and though she possessed an odd dozen or two at home, nothing would please her but the new one, and knowing full well that remonstrances only meant a scene, I handed out the money.

Well, $4.50 will just buy the rug, I thought, and well pleased with the idea I hurried to the rug store and completed my purchase.

"Now, Isabel, there will just be time to get lunch and catch the train."

"And won't we have fun undoing the parcels. And look at my doll, Auntie." But suddenly an awful thought confronted me—I'd not a cent left.

"Not confiding my anxiety to Isabel, I turned back to the big store, and, explaining my dilemma to the obliging man who had served me only a few minutes before, asked him if he would return the $4.50, and I would send for the rug in a few days. Not he, and surely no man could be more snappish and disagreeable. "It's not our way of doing business."

To another store where I had spent most of my money I applied—feeling like a beggar, but not even $2 would they let me have, and, loathing the parcels I was carrying around and willing to sell the whole lot of them up for one-tenth of what they had cost me, I racked my brain for some way of disposing of them, but no idea came, The only people I knew lived miles a tway, and I had no car fare. I was cross and hungry and Isabel was whimpering for her lunch. I'll send a telegram for some money, thought I, but where was the quarter to do it with? And more disconsolate than ever, we wearily sought the parck with our detestible bundles.

"We are poorer than all these tramps." Isabel sobbed. "Oh, I do wish

"Well, you haven't, so say nothing about it."

about it."

How horribly cross I was and how the child cried, until I was forced to rid myself of some of my ill-humor and turn comforter.

"Can't we go somewhere?"

"Silly child, where can we go without money?"

"Will we have to sleep here?" with wild sobs at the thought.

"It looks like it. Now hush, child, let me think of something to do."

City Briefs.

The country has been seized with the gold fever many times in the last fifty years, but never since the yellow particles were first found in the Sacramento Valley has there been any such widespread interest as is now displayed over the Yukon discoveries. Men, and even women, talk of nothing else. In nearly every city parties are being organized to invade the Klondyke district. The first consideration, however, is to know how to get there; when to go and what to do when you get there. All this information can be obtained from the only authentic "Gold Fields of the Klondyke," Just issued at the popular price of 25 cents. some Predictions by Prof. Elihu

Thomson.

Prof. Elihu Thomson's address at the recent educational conference at Eliot, Me., embodies some interesting forecasts in regard to electrical development. The following passage from Prof. Thomson's opening remarks is notable for its presentation of profound scientific though: "To me has been left that most dimcuit of all tasks, the predicting the future of electricity. Who can tell what discoveries are yet to be made; who can set the bounds to human insight, to invention, to discovery? Three years ago, the wonderful Roentgen ray was not known to exist. All the prophets of the past and had their try at it, but no one hinted at its existence. All the seers, all the clairvoyants, failed to note its existence, and yet it was for years before our very eyes, pleading, as it were, to be discovered. And it was sadly needed, as its greatly extended use in surgery now abundantly proves. But the history of many other great dis-coveries is much the same, and the fact that the prophets did not predict thme leads me to think that in the present instance I may succeed no better."

fact that the prophets did not predict thme leads me to think that in the present instance I may succeed no better."

Prof. Thomson went on to enumerate some of the directions in which electrical progress might belookedfor. The telephone and the telegraph have not yet reached their limit. Within a year has been seen a development of Hertzian wave telegraphy, predicted as possible not less than eight or nine years ago. By this new system even the conducting whre between stations is abolished, the signals enter and ring bells in inclosed boxes; solid walls of stone or brick make no difference to the passing to and fro of the signals; fog, mist and storm are unable to cut them off. The reason we can do this is that ether travels everywhere, and when we set up other waves, the vibrations pass through air, liquids, and solids. One of the results of this discovery is that navigation in a fog, or near a dangerous shore enshrouded in mist or darkness, need not now prevent those on a passing vessel from ascertaining their position.

If ever man is to acquire a true understanding of the universe, he must study and understand the ether. He knows already that it, is an electromagnetic medium, as through it electrical actions become possible. But when he discovers, if he ever does, that difference which makes the contrast of positive and negative electricities, he will have touched very near to the foundations of all science. One of the next great steps in electrical work will be the obtaining of more light from a given amount of electrical work will be the obtaining of more light from a given amount of electrical energy in chemical work will go on in an increasing ratio, and there will soon be plenty for the rising electrical energine to do in the rapidly-multiplying utilizations, and the transmission of electrical power. Mines will soon be plenty for the rising electrical energine to do in the rapidly-multiplying utilizations, and the transmission of electrical power. Mines will be operated and illuminated entirely by ele

Rebuilding

The excuse of "Rebuilding" for making a sale is as old as the hills. Almost every store which has had cause to move ten feet of shelving or put in a new pane of glass her taken advantage of it at one time or another as an excuse for advertising mythical price reductions. We do not seek to create any false impression. We are going to build an addition of sixty feet to our present store. It is also the intention to remodel the interior. This work makes dust, dirt and confusion. For over thirty days we have been quietly at work reducing the stock to the lowest possible point. Now, in order to reduce stocks still further, we announce that commencing tomorrow morning we will make enormous reductions on all trimmed and untrimmed millinery. Where the reductions are so general as in this case we do not find it practical to publish prices, but you can depend on one thing: if you need anything at all in millinery you can make a great saving by buying this week at Zobel's.

The long distance telephone wire between his house in Canton and Mr. Hanna's office in Cleveland was kept hot with confidential messages. He had speeches to write and an enormous correspondence to answer. Mrs. McKinley and he looked over much of the mail together, and to many of the letters he dictated answers. Then the election came and the excitement following it. His real Presidential work began immediately after election, and it has steadily continued up to his present vacation. I don't believe we have ever had a President who has tried harder to find out the right and do it than has McKinley. He has taken advice from every part of the country, though he has acted for himself. He has, as he said to a friend the other day, tried to keep his ear close to the ground. This was what called so many statesmen to Canton after the election. Then between times his inaugural had to be written, his Cabinet made up and the hurrah and excitement of taking possession of the White House undergone.

ROM time immemorial poets have sung of wine and its enchantments, and very many of them have fallen victims. Mr. Charles Eugene Banks, "The Poet of the People," tells in graphic prose how he

"Six and a half years ago, on a bleak, sunless February afternoon, in a straggling village on the prairies of Illinois, a tall, gray man looked down into the depths of my troubled soul and told me a great truth. The man was Dr. Keeley, and what he told me was this: 'Every human being is the author of his own happiness and his own misery. Your physician may assist nature to eliminate poison from your system, but your reason, and that alone, can keep it pure.'

"His words fell on dull ears. What was a great truth to one in whose feebly beating heart there remained but one wish-to die?

"Six weeks later I stood again in Chicago, but another wish was rioting through veins overfull of good, red blood-the wish to live. The alchemist of Dwight had changed the hand of iron that had been crushing out all the beauty in the world, to one alive with love showering fresh flowers everywhere.

"This is the change as I remember it. "I have been learning of those words every day since that blessed release. There is nothing in the books of the world so wonderfu! to me as the transformation of myself. "There is no joy in even a thought of the old foolish days,

"Dr. Keeley taught me to consider myself, and so long as that teaching guides my life I could find no temptation in the wine that kept me ignorant.

is now looking to rest his soul. His quarters are in the annex of the hotel, with windows giving views of both take and mountains. Out in front of him there is a dense forest of dark green pines through which the breezes from the Green Mountains of Vermont fush after their fight across the lake, in order that they may be perfumed with life-giving balsam before they less the President's lips. Beyond the pines lies Lake Champlain its glassy surface slightly rippled by the breeze and painted with golden wavelets by the setting sun. A long chain of pretty islands lie with great enteralds upon this sea of gold, and beyond are the smoky blue hills growing darker as they rise one upon the other until they saw their way into the silver and purple sky. How quiet it is. You can hear the clack, clack, clack, clack of that man's feet as they touch the steps of the stairs which lead from the hotel piazza down the bluff to the beach. You can hear the birds singing in the trees, chattering at one another and one now and then bursting out into a volume of liquid song. That is the concert which greets the President's ears as he opens his eyes in the morning—a concert which is kept merrily up all day long.

Let us turn about and look out of another window. In front of us are some of the highest of the Adinondarks, their peaks resting in the golden clouds. Between the mountains and the President's a park of velvety greeh, and there upon lisher two ground squirrels playing. They have come out of the pines for a gambol together and almost scare that robin redreast, who, though it is late in the day, is diligently seeking for the typical worms.

other El Dorado.

[Chicago News:] Dr. Ernest O. Crewe of No. 167 Dearborn street, who is a mining expert as well as a physician, will leave Chicago next Wednesday with Gilbert Witters of Saginaw, Mich., and a small party of prospectors for Alaska, and if the story told today by the doctor is half true regarding Alaska's mineral wealth every man in the party will return worth millions.

the party will return worth millions.
The Klondyke district is not the section of the country the Crewe party will go to, but it will be on American soil, and the doctor declares it is vastly more rich in wealth which is easy to get at than the Klondyke region ever thought of being.

more rich in wealth which is easy to get at than the Klondyke region ever thought of being.

The party is having its mining outfit made in Chicago and by Monday evening nearly everything will be in readiness for the start. Dr. Crewe, who is an Englishman, spent two years in Alaska, part of the time with Bishop Tosi, in 1895, and he says he hangwa exactly what to take on an Alaska mining trip.

The doctor will not give the exact the docation of the El Dorado he alone has seen, but says it is 500 miles from the nearest trading post and is northward from Fort Yukon.

"There will be a rush to that spot of gold as soon as it becomes known," said Dr. Crewe today. "I know it is more rich than the Klondyke, because I have visited both places. I was one of the first twenty men to arrive at Circle City and I know the entire surrounding country. I brought back $48,000 on my trip when I returned last year and I had intended to remain in the States until next fall, but the rush

SCHOOL TEACHERS. Very grave responsibilities rest upon the public school teacher in preparing the youth for twentieth century contests. The true teacher must devote the entire energies to uplifting the morality of children and live both for self and the pupil.—[Rev. Frederick B. Creu, Eaptist, Waltham, Mass.

TOIL AND WEALTH. That a few families in New York have retained their wealth for over one nundred years shows that the corpuscles of acquisitiveness are still alive in their blood. To know how to keep a fortune one must know the value of a dollar.—five hours of sweat—[Rev. John R. Paxton, Presbyterian, New York City. NATIONAL EVILS. The absence of the note of greatness from the material progress, from the current literature, from professional success and from political action is owing chiefly to the conspicuous fact that these interests and achievements are not purified and united in the service of the moral ideas.—[Rev. George A. Godron, Cengregationalist, Boston.

companions, even though they be your superiors.—[Rev. D. M. Benham, Presbyterian, Pittsburgh, Pa.

HOME. Maybe you have stood at the old homeplace and looked at the spot where the old house stood—nothing left now but the foundation walls and the old chimney and the old fireplace where you used to sit with mother when you were a boy. What made you leave home, anyway?—[Rev. E. R. McCauley, Lutheran, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

OVER PIOUS. The people who are too pious to enjoy outdoor exercise and breathe the pure air of heaven, even on the Sabbath, are too religious to be of much consequence to themselves or to the world about them, and the sooner, to my mind, they are translated, or build a little world and fence it in, the better for all concerned.—[Rev. THE WORK OF GOTH. The old Goth kneeling in the forest put his hands together in the form of a sharp capital A. Comforted by that aspiring mood, he asked the praying hands to repeat their form in the upward pointing windows. Analyzed, his cathedral is a frozen prayer, a petrified pulse-beat, the outer and material embodiment of an inner and spiritual aspiration.—[Rev. N. D. Hillis, Independent, Chicago, Ill.

MODERN PROPHETS. Men blunder when they try of prophesy. When William JL. Seward prophesied at the beginning of our civil war that it would be all over in a month—that it would be all over in a month—that it would be a sort of before breakfast job—he was a poor prophet. When Tom Paine prophesied at a dinner party, "Gentlemen, in five years there will not be a Bible left in America." he was a poor prophet.—[Rev. S. W. Brown, Kansas City, Mo.

PERSONAL EDUCATION. I like to fish and hunt, and there are folk who think it is perfectly horrible to do either of these. Some women have told me that there was nothing more villainous than shooting innocent little birds, and nothing more degrading than catching fish. I plead guilty to these latter. But then I asked these women if they ever ate mutton, and they said they did. You see it's all a matter of personal education.—[Rev. Thomas Dixon, Evengelist, New York City.

Yvette Guilbert's Earnings.

Yvette Guilbert, or, as one should say, Mme. Schiller, since her recent marriage with a wealthy American chemist, has earned more than a million francs in her professional career, But, over and above this sum, she has made something like another million on the stock exchange, thanks to the late Barney Barnato. During one of his soiourns in Paris the late millionaire presented Mile. Guilbert with a handful of shares in a certain mine. The gold fever had not then set in in France, and Barney insisted on secrecy as to the possibilities of the shares in question. Of course, mademoiselle gave the "good thing" away, and up went the shares, so that Yvette netted another million shares, as she had the good sense to sell out when the paper was at a premium. She is now a rich woman; her salary is never less than $25,000 a year, and, what is more, she is a happy wife.

Virginia, I know that McKinley would OW UNCLE SAM LOST A COLO-NEL AND GOT A PRESIDENT. The President will be in his element at the Grand Army reunion at Buffalo. He is a strong Grand Army man, and always wears a red, white and blue hotton in the lapel of his coat. He had one on when I called upon him today. He likes to go over his soldier life with his old comrades, and his eyes lighted up when I mentioned the Grand Army. He is fond of military affairs, and it is not known to many that he narrowly escaped being swallowed up in the negular army when the war closed. He entered the service, you remember, as a boy, was promoted to be captain, and finally rose to the rank of major, receiving much honorable mention from his superior officers. He was given to understand at the close of the war that if he remained in the service he would be well treated, and he came back home full of the idea of joining the regular army and making war his profession for life. A good salary was sure at the start, and the uniform seemed popular and pleasing. When he proposed the matter to his father, however, the elder McKinley, who was a man of strong commonsense, said nothing for a moment, and then settled the business as far as his advice was concerned, in the following: "Well, William, you may do as you please, but I have never thought that soldlers amounted to much in times of peace." The President will be in his element of peace."

This set young McKinley to thinking, and the result was that he gave up his soldier idea and went to studying law. Then he became prosecuting attorney, and the law thus formed the stepping-stone to his political career which landed him in the White House. Had he chosen the other path he might possibly have heen the colonel of the regiment which is at the barracks here today's subject to some other man, who, in that case, would now hold the place of President of the United States.

San Francisco press is now cussing the momentous question whether society should receive with open arms that piece of damaged whether society should receive with open arms that piece of damaged goods, Mrs. Bradbury, because of the absolution her husband has given her. There are differing views expressed, but the large majority of women interviewed by the yellow press upon this subject fail to perceive how Mrs. Bradbury's character has been restored by matrimonial whitewash, and very this subject fail to perceive now Mrs. Bradbury's character has been restored by, matrimonial whitewash, and very sensibly reply: "This woman cannot be received in good social circles and placed alongside of our daughters as an example of one made whole and washed whiter than snow. She deliberately took moral leprosy upon her, defied the laws of God and man, scoffed at social codes, and however repentant now she must bear her punishment as a sincere penitent should." Now let it be hoped, for the sake of common decency, that such answers will close the nasty question and induce the nude press to drop the whole subject. For however plated and sugar-coated, however adroitly treated by word jugglers, it is not the kind of reading matter that self-respecting people and considerate parents wish the plastic mind of youth to come into contact with, as it must if the filthy matter is thrust into the columns of the daily press.

He came forth from the creating hand in a garden filled with beauty and fragrance, and the morning sun was rising in the east. The hours sped swiftly by in glad delight; the sun climbed to the zenith and sank toward the western horizon, when a new thought leaped up in his mind: "Will it go away?" The sun went down below the hills and the thought became dread. "Will it The sun well decame dread. "Will it never more return?" The twilight deepened and the dread in his heart increased. "Will all light go away? Will deepened and the dread in his heart in-creased. "Will all light go away? Will it ever come again?" By chance he cast his eye upward and he saw a star. Presently other stars appeared and, as he watched them one by one come out, he saw at length "the glit-tering host bestud the sky," ten thou-sand million suns unseen by day. Halifax, and the inhabitants of that quaint old town are making much of the occasion. Two years ago the Haligonians rejoiced in the report that the Indiana could be prepared for her official speed trial only by docking at Halifax; but for political reasons the ship ran her course with a foul bottom, and, in the name of patriotism, her builders had to dream of the other quarter-knots and the added bonus she would certainly have gained had she been properly slicked.

After a venturesome effort and a favoring gale, so to speak, the craftwas docked at Port Royal, but the single experiment sufficed and today our ship is in a British drydock.

The naval weakness of the United States, at present, is in her lack of efficient docking facilities; and no matter how strong may be our line of battle, we shall be seriously handieapped so long as we are minus docks of sufficient size and strength to handle the largest of our ships.

of sufficient size and strength to han-die the largest of our ships.

In case of war with Great Britain the Halifax dock would be closed to us of course, while in the event of trouble with another nation the laws of neutrality would deny that dock to us except our ships were really in a sinking condition.

The Indiana, which is one of the navy's most powerful battleships, has been in the water for the past sixteen

It was proposed some weeks ago to dock the ship in drydock No. 3, at the navy yard, New York, but the mishap to that structure precluded that.

Next, the department turned its attention to the dock at Port Royal, S. C., but Rear-Admiral E. C. Matthews, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, streuously objected fearing lest the structure might give way under the vessel's weight and wreck her then and there. Finally, Halifax was rethe vessel's weight and wreck her then and there. Finally, Halifax was resorted to, and this government is paying a very pretty figure to the company in control of that dock.

Had it not been for the danger of permanent injury to the ship, the department would have kept the 'Indiana in the water till the work on the New York dock were finished; but Chief Constructor Hichborn urged that any further delay in cleaning and painting the vessel would result in damaging her bottom plating, while the added cost of propulsion, owing to her fouled bottom, would grow wellnigh daily. The United States owns but eleven docks for the accomodation of its naval vessels, and, at present, the Puget Sound dock is the only one available for handling a battleship.

The total assessed value of eity property was fixed by City As-sessor Seaman at approximately $60,-100,000, as compared with $52,000,000 last year. About one-half the increase arose from changes within the old city limits, and one-half was the value of property in the annexed district. immediate and easy reach of the local authorities. The prosecution will, therefore, take no chances and will_exert every legitimate means to keep the defaulter where they can place their hands upon him whenever he is needed. Upon the first charge for which Blackman was held, ball was fixed at $2500. The prosecution deemed this amount too small and immediately caused to be filed two other coimplaints—one for $137 and another for $500. Blackman's bond was then increased to $7500. Subsequent to the filing of the above additional charges the District Attorney decided to enter a separate charge of embezzlement of the sum of $10,000, which sum was considered sufficient to cover the entire amount appropriated by Blackman to his own use during the period of unsuspected and uninterrupted peculations. Blackman, was arraigned last week on the $10,000 charge and entered a plea of not guilty. The court, at that time, decided to refix his bonds at $7500, fixing the preliminary examination for the 21st inst. When brought into court yesterday, Blackman exhibited unmistakable evidence of the effects of confinement in the County Jall, although he has been shown every consideration compatible with the rules and regulations of that institution. He looked worried and disconsolate as he took a seat beside his attorneys and appeared to be anything but at ease while Expert Polndexter, on behalf of the prosecution, explained the manner in which Blackman had made entries in the books of his employers when attempting to cover up many of his larger defalcations. $1,000,000 less than the Assessor's. This will bring the total assessed valuation of the entire city down to a figure between $58,000,000 and $58,500,000. John Bailey, Will Peck, John Cully and George Cully of San Pedro were arrested last night for disturbing the peace. The quartette, in a fishing boat, has spent the past twelve days in sailing about the island, causing the officers here no little anxiety lest they effect a landing. A large tin horn was used by the quartette for saluting purposes, but when they persisted in saluting home yachts, in the bay, after 11 o'clock Thursday night, a warrant for their arrest was sworn out on the above charge. They were taken in custody about 6 o'clock last night, but all were immediately released upon delivering up $10 cash bail each. They will be given a hearing today.

Paving of Pearl Street.

J. C. Foy, who was reported as being opposed to the paving of Pearl street, says his purpose in making a motion, at the meeting of property-owners, to make no improvement, was misunderstood by somebody, although he thought he had clearly explained the motion. There were three possible lines of action, viz., to pave with porphyry, to gravel the street, or to abandon the project, and he made the motion in order to have it voted down and the way cleared for definite action. Three-fourths of the property-owners were opposed to asphalt paving, and that method of improvement required no further consideration. Mr. Foy says he is in favor of paving the street, and his father desires to do whatever the majority wishes, and does not desire to block improvements on the street.

We Advertise What We Have.

We Sell What We Advertise.

This is Bargain Week at Hale's===Closing Out Every Seasonable Article in Our Great Stock.

We stand this week unrivaled and unequaled for the magnitude of our bargains. Our rebuilding prevented our selling; goods were delayed; the season was late; the result is we find a larger stock on our hands than ordinary selling will ever dispose of before the season wanes. We always adhere strictly to our policy of never carrying an unseasonable article. Thus these qualities, these values, these prices. Immense stocks of new goods are arriving. We are bewildered. A glance at the following prices will prove how determined we are to close out all summer goods at once. We can but intimate what a visit here will reveal.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

In a recent interview Mile. Augusta Holmes, says the Boston Herald, gave Rhe following interesting particulars of Fer life and musical career:

"I have had to struggle both as a composer and a woman. Do not believe, whatever may be said, that the artistic career is more accessible to my sex. This is a grave error. The steps are infinitely more difficult, and the good-ord by the provided that the artistic career is more accessible to my sex. This is a grave error. The steps are infinitely more difficult, and the good-ord hell-luck to be born a musician! Ill, if the composer is obliged to live by her music, for how rarely can she live by it. She, who would be able, if circumstances were not unduly hard, to devote all her time to the muse, is obliged to give lessons, to bother about, fees, and harried and tired out with this occupation, from which she can seldom withdraw herself, is further expected to produce a work! What a profession! I have never known a ward of the provided herself the cathedral, but my veritable musical career dates from Cesar Franck. I knew him at Verself the provided herself the provi tinction, and a single one for the tinction, and a single one for the exacquis' prize. I consoled myself for this check by laying the flattering unction to my soul that St. Saens, Massenet, Cesar Franck, Octave Fouque, Lascoux, Benjamin Godard, Lamoreaux, Colonne, and Emile Perrin had voted in my favor. I had against me M. Herold, prefet de la Seine, Ambroise Thomas, and the municipal councillors. But these were not the only tribulations that lay in wait for my unfortunate score. After asking for a grant to defray the expenses of its public performance—which was denied me—I had to submit to rebuffs at the hands of many publishers. One day, having almost renounced the idea of publication, I was passing the establishment of M. Grus, whom I scarcely knew. I walked in on the chance and asked, without any preamble, if he would undertake the publication of my work? What was my surprise when he replied simply, 'Why not?' He then took my symphony, published it, and, further, submitted it to Pasdeloup, who liked it as soon as he had read it through. The latter had it performed at his concert on the 24th of April 1881 and it achieved. I may it performed at his concert on the 24th of April, 1881, and it achieved, I may say without false modesty, an immense si performed at his concert on the 24th of April, 1881, and it achieved. I may say without false modesty, an immense success.

"After 'Les Argonautes,' I composed successively 'Irlande,' 'Les Sept Iveresses,' a collection of melodies, 'Vision de Sainte Therese,' a 'Veni Creator,' 'Ludus pro Patra,' after the admirable picture by Puvis de Chavannes, and then the 'Ode Triomphale.'
"For ten years I had cherished the prefect of creating a patriotic work executed by great choral and orchestral masses: I will tell you how my idea was realized.' The anniversary of .1789 presented itself, and funds were voted for popular fetes and banquets to take place; but there was no talk of anything novel in the spectacular line. I thought the moment was ripe to make known my views, and I proceeded to pay a visit to Joffrin, the Paris deputy. The idea fascinated him, and he introduced me to Alphand, the great municipal organizer. The latter instantly adopted my project, and devoted to it the entire f.300,000 which had been voted as a subsidy for the fetes, on account of the novelty it presented. You must remember the gigantic representations given at the Palais de l'Industrie, which was transformed into the auditorium? The orchestra comprised 300 musicians, directed by Colonne, and in addition to the supers there were over nine hundred choristers on the stage. Four performances of the 'Ode' took place; the first was given for nobilities, the second for school children, while the third was a free performance of the popule. The last was supplementary, with admission by payment, the proceeds, which were given for the relief of the sufferers from the floods in Antwerp, amounting to f.90,000.

"The year following the committee of the fetes to be given in honor of Beatrice and Dante wrote me from Florence to ask if a French voice might be included to participate in the cause of concord. It was thus that I composed the 'Hymne a la Paix,' that was executed at the Politeama. under the direction of Contruccl. I was recalled eighteen times on the stage! Returning from Italy, I composed the symphony, the 'Pays Bleu,' which I have previously mentioned to posed the symphony, the 'Pays Bleu,' [Musical Age:] Oh, these doctors of music! I do not believe that in the history of our country there has been a single title—not even the familiar "Jedge" and 'Cu'nnel"—more abused than theirs.

I knew a reporter once who was sent to interview E. A. McDowell, when the latter was first put in charge of the musical department at Columbia College.

"Good morning, professor--," he

"Good morning, professor—," he began.

The person addressed fidgeted viribly, "My name's MacDowell," he said, finally; "er—what can I do for you?" MacDowell has the rare gift-an especially rare one in a man of his retiring disposition—of being a charming man to talk to. He put the young fellow entirely at his ease, and after five minutes they were getting on swimmingly. Ten minutes later the young reporter put up his notebook and i encil.

Born in 1740, in Minorca, he was early in life apprenticed to a trade, but always took an ardent delight in the study of music during his leisure hours. Barbandt was his first instructor.

In 1763 he first appeared as a composer, and three years later his canon,

"O, That I Had Wings," won him the prize of the London Catch Club.

He won a number of prizes and testimonials in the course of a busy musical life, during which he turned out book after book of compositions. Strange to say, his best are those that in his own day attracted the least attention. "When Winds Breathe Scft," "Come Live With Me," and "Thy Voice, O Harmony," and the catch, "Would You Know My Cella's Chaims," are gems of their kind.

In 1874 Rubinstein was present when Tchaikowsky's quartette in F-major was performed. After listening with signs of disapprobation, he announced in his usual pitiless, outspoken manner that the style was not that of chamber music, that he could not understand the composition in the least, and so on. The recent movements of the Hon. W. B. Hooker, chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives, who is now on the Southern Coast on a tour of inspection, are recorded in another part of this morning's TIMES. He is at Santa Monica this morning, and a public reception will be tendered him at the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. This reception will without doubt be largely attended, as our citizens, without respect to party, are ready and anxious to extend to the distinguished gentleman those courtesies which are due to one occupying his exalted station in the public service. Members of the Chamber, of the Board of Trade, of the Free Harbor League, and of the Merchants' Association are expected to be present, in force, as well as many other representative business absorb and assimilate into its moneand professional men not connected with these four leading business organizations.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Much has been written during the past few years in regard to the successful carrying out of the municipa ewnership of public utilities in Glas gow, Birmingham, Berlin and other cities in England and on the continent of Europe. London, the greatest city of the world, is also about to fall into tine, and control its own municipal This involves the handling of an immense amount of money. The population under the control of the London authorities is over 6.000 -000, and the annual expenditures for municipal purposes is considerably

The London authorities will now make restrictions as to what use shall be made of the streets by companies engaged in the transportation of passengers, of the wages they shall pay their employés, and the number hours constituting a day's labor.

London is also about to grapple with the water question. It is proposed to build two aqueducts, 150 and 170 miles in length, at a cost of $200,000,000, and to take the water system out of the nands of eight private companies now controlling the supply. This will be done by compulsory purchase, and, judging from the way they usuar'y do these things in England, it would not be rash to predict that the London water question may be definitely settled sooner than much smaller American cities have been able to settle their water troubles. heartily approve of the municipal ownership of public utilities draw the line of acquisition of street-car sys-In Glasgow, however, it has been found that the ownership of of water, good soil and the near presstreet-car lines by the city is a decide 1 success. In spite of the gloomy prognostications of Silvercrats, Populists, and other calamityites, the business of the country continues to grow and expand in a wonderful manner. The weekly reports of the commercial agencies show steady gains in nearly all sections of the country, with indications that the favorable movement will continue indefinitely. There is no longer any doubt that Prosperity, with a capital P, has arrived; and it has come to stay.

BUSINESS STILL IMPROVING.

Bradstreet's reports a large increase in the volume of trade during the past week, with advancing prices. No such volume of business has been reported since 1892, when trade reached high-water mark. The total of back clearings for the week was 40 per cent larger than for the third week of August, 1896, and 25 per cent. higher than for the corresponding week of 1895. The business failures for the week numbered 221, against 456 in the third week of August, 1893.

Dun's weekly review of trade tells a similar story of general business activity. Telegraphic reports from all parts of the country are more favor able than at any previous time in five years. In almost every line of industry the activity is phenomenal and the outlook bright.

All this is very discouraging to the Bryanite contingent, who have stoutly contended all along that there could be no return of prosperity until a law was enacted providing for "the free unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, with out waiting for the consent of any other nation." But in proportion as the Bryanite contingent grows disheartened, the business world and the people at large gain in confidence and hopefulness Therefore let the calamity howlers howl, the heathen rage, and the silverpops imagine a vain thing.

WHY THEY GO TO EUROPE At this season of the year, it is usual to read in many of the papers criticisms of Americans who go over to Europe for a vacation instead of exploring their own country, of which they frequently know very little. Commenting upon the fact that a party of half a dozen young men has been made up in Northern California, for a trip through Switzerland, a Southern California contemporary suggests that it would be better in all respects if they would first visit the beautiful sections of this State, which are scattered along the Sierra Nevada and foothill ranges. Such criticisms as this are in many which is little short of a shame. According to advices received by the State Department, there has been a rise in prices in Mexico caused by the drop in silver, but no corresponding advance in wages or salaries which still stay on a silver basis. Rents have gone up and so have the prices of fall domestic products, but the poor devil who has to work for wages is worse off than he ever was. LETTERS TO THE TIMES. The Mixing of Races.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9, 1897.— [To the Editor of The Times:] Twenty years ago Rev. Sheldon Jackson, now of Alaska, but then occupying a field in New Mexico, made similar statements about the people of that Terri tory to those you quote this morning from a letter in the New York Times

But New Mexico declared by all the gods at once that Rev. Jackson was economical in the use of truth. It goes without saying that wherever the Latin people settled in the new world, half-breeds became the rule, while they were the exception in the Anglo-whistle in lieu of the curfew bell, and the recitationist has to make it go "curfew shall not blow tonight," or he is liable to get mobbed for going back on his town.

The next man who comes around this office warbling, "Oh, I don't know, it's not so warm. There are other spots as warm as this," is going to get it, get it good. Let the measily miscreant take notice and govern himself accordingly.

If Alaska had any style about it they would call that long river the Seward instead of the Yukon. At least they ought to honor the wise old man that bought the territory in some way, and it is time they did it.

When the Americans first came to California, San Francisco had less than two hundred inhabitants, and Los Angeles had less than two thousand. Hence, the population has been largely made up by immigration since that time. The discovery of gold orought in nearly such a class as is now going to Klondyke, but with better visible means of keeping warm in the winter. Southern California did not receive much of that flood. She had to wait for other developments. Los Angeles is made up of representative people of the country. This does not refer to a self-appointed four hunired, or, as the editor of The Times has aptly said, "298." People who have made themselves millions by watering stock and other swindling devices will do anything else not found on the road to heaven.

Pasadena Boulevard.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 21, 1897.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The construction of the boulevard between Los Angeles and Pasadena by way of the East Side Park, is a far-reaching and important undertaking. If no mistake is made in the location of the converse is made in the location of the connect-ing link between East Side Park and the Plaza, it will tend to concentrate and pour into the north ends of Los Angeles, Main and Spring streets the entire business of Pasadena, and the San Gabriel Valley. The property-san Gabriei valley. The propertyowners on these streets are therefore deeply interested in the project not only because their property is to be benefited, but because it will have to be included in an assessment district which is to be formed to pay for the improvement. The Boulevard Committee acted wisely in calling in for consultation the property-holders along these streets.

Several propositions should be considered. The route recommended by the consulting engineers makes a direct line from the Plaza to the East Side Park. This drive will be entirely free from railroads for its entire distance from Los Angeles to Pasadena;
no street-car track, nor steam railroads will be paralleled, and none crossed on grade, so that accidents from these causes will be minimized. This, however, means the construction of two costly viaducts—one across the railroad tracks on Alameda street, and the other across the Santa Fé and Terminal tracks at the river. By crossing these railroads on grade and protecting the driveway by gates and guards, the cost on this line can be very much reduced. The line recommended by the engineers does not, however, necessarily benefit East Los Angeles, and it would not be right to include her in the assessment district for this route.
The route which would benefit her most would be to widen Buena Vista street to the river, and then make a new and direct street to the East Side Park, or connect with and widen some of the streets already laid out. While this last route is longer than the cne suggested by the engineers, and Buena Vista street is encumbered by a street railroad, it has many advantages. It crosses no railroad on grade, it opens up a beautiful drive to Elyisan Park, connects it with East Side Park, which may also be connected by way of sot street with Hollenbeck Park; thus starting a system of boulevards connecting all of our parks. For the construction of a drive on these lines, the whole of East Los Angeles could be included in the assessment district.
The wis our parks by connecting boulevards, and would distribute the cost equitably according to benefits. E. A. L.

A FALL TO FORTUNE.

CURIOUS DISCOVERY OF A TUR-QUOISE MINE.

Artecs' Carefully Obliterated Work tle and Eggs-Largest Turquoise Ever Cut in the United States.

A prominent mining man of this city, who has recently returned from a trip to the wonderful turquoise in Lincoln county, Nevada, by George Simmons, tells a fascinating tale of the treasure find that might easily serve as the basis of a "shilling

Simmons was sinking a shaft, about the story goes, and when he had ved at a distance of about four eneath the surface, came upon takable signs that other delvers een there before him and had ly filled in and covered up excavations. Curiosity lent aded vigor to his arm and down he dug until suddenly, without a warn-ing, the bottom of the shaft dropped out and deposited him in an old drift or tunnel forty feet below. Recovering from this advantageous but somewhat abrupt assistance in the way he desired to go, he followed the drift and opened up a series of workings, aggregating several hundred feet. In exploring the various tunnels and drifts, the miner came across numerous copper implements known to the guild as "gads," single-hand hammers and quantities of obsidian implements, the character of which proved beyond a doubt that the mine had been worked by Aztecs. Rummaging onward, the explorer reached the end of one of the tunnels, and turning over a heap of old pottery and fragmentary ollas, came upon a curio that should find its place in the local Chamber of Commerce, a petrified turtle, twelve inches in diampetrined turtle, twelve inches in diameter, and five petrified eggs. As the ancient reptile and its stony fruit are now in Denver, and the aforesaid prominent mining man, who himself gazed upon these relics of past ages, vouches with irrefutable solemnity for the veracity of the tale, it may be accepted without a blink.

The old excayations were of such cepted without a blink.

The old excavations were of such a nature as to show that the mine had been heavily worked, and the supposition is that the Aztecs must have traveled up from Mexico for the turquoise treasures, and later carefully obliterated all signs of the discovery in their desire to keep the mine from the knowledge of their conquerors, the Spaniards, Inquiries among the Blitte. Inquiries among the Piute and Mojave Indians in that county developed the fact that this mine has never been known to them, nor do their implements and utensils bear any resemblance to those found in the long-forgotten drifts.

resemblance to those found in the long-forgotten drifts.

Simmons' work was rewarded by the discovery of rarely beautiful specimens of the coveted blue stone, and the lucky miner hied himself to Denver, bearing with him two of the choicest pieces for the purpose of naving them cut and tested. One piece cut 64 ounces, the largest piece of turquoise ever cut in the United States, and was sold in Denver for turquoise ever cut in the United States, and was sold in Denver for $4000 to representatives of Tiffany. The other piece, which was also a very fine stone, cut 30 ounces.

The only true turquoises heretofore found on this continent have been obtained from mines in New Mexico, controlled by Tiffany. A number of other mines have been discovered, but their excavated treasures have failed to stand the jeweler's test. The Simmons turquoises, however, have passed the hardest tests, and the mine, a half interest of which has been bonded to Denver parties at highly satisfactory terms, bids fair to become a property of great value.

This movement is due to the fact that many of the owners of peach orchards are seriously considering their removal to make way for oranges, on account of the low prices which have prevailed for peaches during the past few years. This movement, supplementing the destruction of a number of prune orchards this year, looks as though the farmers were inclined to carry all their eggs to market in one basket. During the past week there has arrived here and been transported to the cafion a carload of giant powder, for use in constructing the electric light and power company's plant, and day and night there is to be heard the regular cannonading of the blasts. The association has marketed the apricots dried this year at 4½ to 4% cents per pound, three cars of the fruit being shipped the past week. Work has been begun on the new orange-packing house for the Azusa association, and the plans call for one of the most complete buildings of the character in the State. here, that there may be a better local Precautions to be Observed Against Typhoid Fever.

Some Common Sources of Danger. Meeting of the Board of Public Works-Pasadena Boulevard Mat.er Again Postponed.

The Board of Health has issued a circular recommending precautions against typhoid fever. While it is not feared that an epidemic of typhoid will occur, the disease is so insidious that it was deemed advisable to publish some information as to the ordinary precautions that should be observed for its prevention.

The greatest source of danger is The greatest source of unager and rinking water which has been contaminated by sewage. Dangerously contaminated water may be, and often is, clear and colorless, with no bad the leading often conveys the type of the taste. Ice also often conveys the typhoid bacillus, as it is not killed by freezing. Milk may become the vehicle for the disease. It may also be communicated through other foods, by defective plumbing, or by infected clothing.

To avoid infection the Board of Health makes the following recommendations:

'The most scrupulous care should be taken to Weep the source of drinking water pue and to procure supplies only from cleán sources."

OFFICE OF THE TIMES, Los Angeles, Aug. 21, 1897. BANK CLEARINGS. The bank clearings of the principal cities of the country for the week ended Friday, as ported by Bradstreet's, make a most remarkable and gratifying showing, the average increase over the corresponding week of last year being 40.2 per cent., only eight cities of those reported showing a decrease. These figures indicate a crop somewhat below that of last season. The East shows a considerable falling-off, while the West shows a decided increase. PRICES OF FRUIT FOR CANNING.

PRICES OF FRUIT FOR CANNING. The Times has received the following letter on this subject:

[To the Editor of The Times:]
You say in The Times of the 14th under "commercial," "that you fail to find that there are any combinations among the canners of fruit." This may be true, yet the fact remains that all the canners are paying substantially the same price, and that prices for apricots, peaces, and pears are from $5 to $12 less than are paid in San Francisco. There is no yalla reason for this. Prutts can be canned in Los Angeles as cheap, or more cheaply, than in San Francisco, and canned goods can be shipped at a rate as low to the East from here as from there. Nor can it be claimed that these three varieties of fruit are inferior here to fruit grown up north. Of this any one can convince himself by looking over the markets of truit stands in both places. Neither in heauty of appearance, in size or in flavor is there a difference against this section. In fact, superiority for apricots and peaches may be claimed. As section. In fact, superiority for a cots and peaches may be claimed. the growers here not taking the same care in growing number one fruit, not thinning the fruit, etc... this cuts no figure, for their contract reads that no name rote fruit, fruit that fills in size a 2½-inch ring or over, they pay $14 a ton; for fruit smaller, say 2 inches up to 2% inches, $11 a ton, and there is plenty of the largest size fruit here now, and it would be grown entirely or nearly a figure induces. there is plenty of the largest size fruit here now, and it would be grown entirely, or nearly so, if only an inducement were held out by paying a price to justify the doing it. The price in San Francisco for the same class is $20 for the smaller and $25 for the large. This applies to clingstone peaches, for freestone peaches, you may say, can't be sold here in any cuantity this year at all. The size of apricots is more a matter of variety than any thinning of the fruit or any conditions of cultivation. The Moorpark is the highest-flavored and the largest of all the apricots, but a very shy bearer, and for this reason almost entirely abandoned. The Large Early has more size, but less flavor than the Royal (the apricots generally grown in California) and is, too, a failure in bearing some years. So we may take it that until a variety is found which has size and production to recommend it, we will not be able to suit the wants of canners. Nor is there much to be regretted about this; for apricots bring, as a rule, a satisfactory price as a chied article.

ill undoubtedly have a stimulating fect on the production of beet sugar the United States. We may extend to see a most rapid development the beet-sugar industry in this untry during the next few years, thether California shall benefit by is movement as much as it might, depends largely on whether the igar Trust may obtain control of affirs, as in that case it might pay e trust to keep the production of igar on the Pacific Coast down to a mount consumed here. With the habig stake to play for, however, is scarcely likely that the trust will able to prevent outside competion.

regretted about this; for approach bring, as a rule, a satisfactory price as a cired article.

The great difference in price for fruit between this and other canning centers is very much to be deplored, for it does not merely make against the desire to plant more trees to raise these fruits, and the producer, but the greatest injury, and producer, and the greatest injury, and producer, and prod This condition compels selling for less than the regular price, and in a measure establishes a price which those who sell afterward find it hard to overcome or contend against. This may enable the cainer here to make a certainty of a profit, but it is hard on those who have paid a better price, and ruinous to the producer.

As you say, this is a matter for the growers to overcome, and no doubt they will in time be equal to the problem. Heretofore prices have been, although lower than in San Francisco, yet sufficient to pay for cultivation; but this year only clingstone peaches can be sold, and at such a price as to leave nothing to the grower.

I can see two ways to remedy this uncalled-for condition: One is for growers to do their own canning, for their self-interest will dictate getting the best possible price for the canned goods. The other way is for all growers to agree, as they have done in Sonora, not to sell for less than a certain paying price, and prepare themselves for shipping their clingstone peaches to San Francisco. If there had been an agreement of this kind, even if the grower would have made from $3 to $5 more than they are now getting. There is but little risk in sending clingstone peaches to San Francisco. As to free-stones, these, in the absence of growers owning their own canneries, will have to be dried; nor will, they be any worse off than now, for this is now the necessity as there is no market at the canneries here.

Big Day's Work on the Wharf Catching Corn-fed Mackerel. REDONDO BEACH, Aug. 20.—[Reg. alar Correspondence.] Capt. G. E Munroe, assistant superintendent of wharves, kept the wharf employés hustling yesterday, and when the whistle blew last night to knock off whistle blew last night to knock off work, it was at the close of one of the biggest day's work ever done here. The Corona arrived from San Diego at 3 o'clock Friday morning, and immediately began loading with grain. Men being short, work could not be commenced on the steam schooner Newsboy, that arrived during Thursday night with a full cargo of lumber for the Redondo Lumber Company, until after the Corona had been disposed of, but Capt. Munroe put on all the available hands that could work to advantage, and the Newsboy was discharged and sailed for the north last night. The schooner La Gironde, Capt. Smith, from Gray's Harbor, was docked at wharf No. 2 last evening and began wharf No. 2 last evening and began discharging this morning. She is loaded with 275,647 feet of lumber con-signed to the Redondo Lumber Company.

The steam schooner Protection arrived from the north this morning with a cargo of telephone poles for a Los Angeles firm.

The steamship Santa Rosa is due to arrive Sunday morning with 125 tons of freight and passengers from San Francisco.

The steamship Santa Rosa is due to arrive Sunday morning with 125 tons of freight and passengers from San Francisco.

There was a great deal of excitement on wharf No. 1 this morning, caused by the catching of several large "cornfed" mackerel by one of the wharf fishermen. In a remarkably short time all the available space was taken up by fishermen, for the big mackerel and some of the largest fish ever caught here were carried off the wharf in the baskets of the anglers.

Of all the different kinds of fishing, large mackerel fishing is probably the most exciting. The large ones are very game and strong, and it taxes the strength of the best poles to land two of the corn-fed beauties at a time. Many of the fishermen have their rods broken, when they attempt to land three at once. It is advisable when fishing for corn-fed mackerel to fish with but one or two hooks, as, when they are running good, they usually take all the hooks, and very few bamboo rods will stand the strain of landing more than two at a time.

Dr. W. Woolley was at the grouper banks again yesterday and landed several hundred pounds of red groupers, hallbut and bass.

A young lady from Los Angeles, who spent today at Redondo, rented a fishpole from one of the stands on the wharf, and started in to establish a record for the mackerel fishing. Luck was against her, for the first bite she got was a small yellow-tail and the fish started seaward, and took line and hooks with him, leaving the young lady with the lineless pole in her hands. She procured another line, stronger than the first and caught two cornfed mackerel, breaking the pole in attempting to land them. She again repaired to the fish-pole stand and procured a yellow-tail and the writing is fishing for yellowtail from the new wharf, mackerel fishing being altogether too exciting to suit her.

A Bogus Tuner Working the Rural Districts.

Complaint is made by several of the leading music houses of the city, as well as some of the regularly-established piano-tuners, that a bogus pianotuner is working the country towns and swindling the owners of musical instruments.

The fellow has been operating at Downey, Whittier, Compton, Santa Monica and other places. He is described as a stylish-looking man, of rather slight build, and sporting a black mustache. His modus operandi is to introduce himself as the representative of some well-known pianohouse, or the substitution of some regular tuner unable to keep his engagements. His prices are very reasonable, generally less than the regular rates, and in some instances he has offered to take contracts by the year to keep pianos in tune at ridiculously low figures, payable in advance, of course.

Persons who have seen his work say he does not know anything about repairing or tuning a plano whatever. Generally after tinkering at one and collecting his pay he enjoins the owner not to use it for a few hours, as he has glued some broken part which will require time to set. This excuse is to gain time to leave the place before his fraudulent work is discovered.

At Santa Monica, recently, he undertook to repair a plano for a citizen, who soon discovered the fact that he was a fraud. The irate citizen gave him just one minute to leave the house on penalty of a broken neck. The fellow scarcely waited long enough to gather up his tools, after this threat.

The swindler travels under various aliases, but so far has escaped actual detection. At a number of places he represented himself as a nephew of Mr. Gardner of the firm of Gardner & Zellner, and purported to be working for that firm. He has also used the name of the Southern California Music Company, as being back of him, but the managers of that firm denounce him as a fraud.

A number of music-dealers interviewed stated that they had been annoyed more or less by this scamp's operation, and had heard of various people a Judge Huntington has made an equitable settlement of the case of Putnam vs. Willitts, in which the ownership of two young colts was contested. Putnam agreed with Willitts to share equally the colts raised from a mare belonging to Putnam and bred to Sikwood, the property of Willitts. Two colts were produced, one of which proved to be of good value, the other deficient. Then the parties brought suit to determine the ownership of the colts. The case was argued and submitted on Friday to Judge Huntington. Today Judge Huntington decided the case on equitable terms. He decrees that one party shall take the good colt and pay to the other the difference in value between this and the poor colt.

The number issued during the present month is twenty-three. Only once since the county was formed has there been such a record, and that was two years ago when the whole number for the month of June was twenty-three. So flourishing has the business become that the ing has the business become that the night-watchman stationed at the Court-house has been empowered to issue licenses, and last night he was roused up by a man from the country who wanted a license to wed the maiden of his choice. Something out of the ordinary was witnessed this afternoon when Justice Freeman performed a double wedding ceremony in the parlors of the Bruns-wick. There was nothing private about the affair, the parties having arrived in town early this morning becked for the ceremony, and sundry omenades up and down Fourth street decked for the certains, promenades up and down Fourth street made the couples the cynosure of many watching eyes.

At noon the ceremony was performed, Justice Freeman officiating. Dinner was served in the Brunswick dining-room, there being about thirty in the party. The contracting parties were Harry Kelly of El Toro, and Miss Josephine Brooks of Laguna; and Elmer Clapp of Laguna and Senorita Thessa Lobo of Capistrano.

SHIPPING BUSINESS.

As a shipping center Newport is a busy place. The barley from Orange county farmers is being hauled to the county farmers is being hauled to the wharf, and every departing steamer north-bound, carries away a heavy cargo. The incoming vessels bring a considerable quantity of freight for the merchants of the county, besides large shipments of lumber for dealers in Santa Ana and Los Angeles. Just now the schooners Vidette, G. W. Watson and Salvator are at the wharf with Oregon pine from Puget Sound. The Vidette carries 700,000 feet. The steamer Alcazar is discharging a cargo of redwood lumber from Humboldt, and the Protection is due with more Oregon pine.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY.

SUIT BROUGHT TO ANNUAL A RE-CENT MARRIAGE.

Ranchers Jubilant Over the High Price of Wheat-Largest Wheat Crop'in the History of the Country-Important Ruling Affecting Jurors' Fees-News Notes

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 21 .- [Regular Correspondence.] A suit for the annul-ment of a marriage has been filed in the Superior Court here, and the unusual features connected with it make it an important case. Minnie E. Nickson Kimball, it seems, no longer desires to be known as the wife of the defendant in the case, Ernest E. Kim-ball, a painter in this city, and therefore the court is asked to annul the proceedings which made them husband and wife. At the wedding deremony, which was solemnized last May, a brother of the groom astonished the father of the bride by calling that gentleman to one side and informing him just before the marriage took place that Kimball already had a wife in the State of Missouri, from whom he had not been divorced. This news was a great surprise to the prospective father-in-law, but the wedding party had assembled, and the father, feeling that assembled, and the father, feeling that it all might turn out well, consented to have the marriage solemnized, but immediately after the ceremony took his daughter home with him.

An investigation followed, which resulted in the verification of the statement, and now an action has been brought to annul the marriage con-It is stated now that Kimball's Mis

It is alleged that soon after the solemnizaalleged that soon after the solemniza-tion of this marriage Kimball left the country and his wife, and a few years ago came to California, locating in San Diego, where he has the greater por-tion of the time worked at his trade. BIG WHEAT CROP.

San Diego county, according to par-ties who are in a position to know what san Diego county, according to parties who are in a position to know what they are talking about, will this year produce 125,000 sacks of wheat as against 50,000 sacks last year. A year ago two ships handled the wheat crop of the county, while this year five vessels have already been chartered, and it is quite probable that one or two more will be pressed into service before the shipping season closes. A good deal of wheat is coming in now from Orange and Riverside counties, and the necessity of securing another ship or two to handle the product will depend on the amount that will come in from these two counties for shipment from this port.

The wheat crop in San Diego county this year, it is estimated, constitutes fully half the@grain crop of the county, and ranchers are so well pleased with the present prices of this staple cereal that next year's crop promises to far exceed the large acreage this season.

About 250,000 grain bags have already been brought here to handle the wheat, oat and barley crop of the county, and fully half this large number will be required to hold the wheat crop.

This decree will also result in the dismissal of the replevin suit of the General Electric Company against the Citizens' Traction Company. It is understood that this is a compromise settlement of all the claims of the creditors of the Traction Company, except the Risdon Iron Works. The latter refused to ioin in the settlement and were left out of the deal, and, consequently, have no recourse. The road will now be sold at auction at not less than $40,000, and may be bought in by creditors, although the rival street car company, owned by Spreckels, has a desire to secure it.

IMPORTANT RULING. Judge Hughes rendered an impor-tant decision yesterday for the guidance of county officials in allowing the claims of jurors. In the opinion of the court, payment is authorized for mileage one way at the rate of 15 cents per mile and $2 per diem while in attendance at court, and for the time occupied in reaching the court. Under this ruling jurors summoned to appear in court on a certain day, and through postponement of the case, return to their homes, will be allowed mileage only for their first attendance.

Women Who Have Ruined Their Stomachs with Medicine Are Glad to Adopt a Better Method.

Made with Special Attachment for Ladies.

How much nicer is a gentle, glowing, electric warmth, as it enters the tired nerves and inspires them with new life! How pleasant it is to feel the old-time vigor coming back to the physical body and the blood surging through the veins, carrying pleasure and renewed vitality.

FROM GRATEFUL LADIES:

"Your Belt is a wonderful invention, for I have been cured of rheumatism of many years' standing. It is so easy to wear and so much better than taking so much medicine. If ladies only knew the good there is in it and the good it does, there would be many that would be greatly benefited, as I have been. I cannot say too much in praise or feel thankful enough for the good your treatment has done me.

MRS. H. HACKADAY, Vineland, Cal.

DEAR SIR: Your Belt has proved worthy of trust after six weeks' use. My trouble was inflammation of the womb and ovaries, and also an abscess on the left ovary. I had been ill for six weeks, and just before I purchased your Belt the doctors that had been attending me wished me to undergo an operation, but as I refused to allow them, they put it off, saying that if I would not submit I would become an invalid for life, as my limbs were very weak and were threatened with paralysis. I heard of your Belt, and concluded to try it. Immediately upon application I found relief. The day I put it on I was in bed and was not able to turn, and could not raise my hand to my head without terrible pain, but the next day I could use my limbs and was very much stronger. Thave kept on improving ever since, and today I am better than for the past six years, and appreciate the good your treatment has done and am only too glad to praise it.

SUCH CURES ARE REPORTED EVERY DAY.

This simple fact cannot be questioned-Dr. Sanden's Electric Belt is responsible for more cures of disease and weakness than all the other remedies combined. It is a noteworthy fact that, of all the advertised remedies on the market today, there is not one which makes public the number of cures-of home cures-shown by this meritorious article. Surely, such evidence must bear weight. It is not a question of delicacy with these people who say Dr. Sanden's Belt cured them-it is a matter of human gratitude-gratitude for their cures and desire to let others know where the cure is to be found. These people are well known in Los Angelès—their friends are buying Dr. Sanden's Belt on their recommendation. It is known by hundreds of their neighbors how sick they were and how they got cured. If you doubt it still, call on them or write for their testimony—it will be given gladly, for they are grateful people and will be glad to set other unfortunate sufferers on the road to health.

No sick person need be sick any longer; no weak man or woman need feel the loss of vital force when here is a means of regaining it. Throw aside drugs-they only poison your stomach-take up the true source of health-Electricity-is will cure you, and for only as much as one month's doctor bill costs.

If you feel that you need help, call at Dr. Sanden's office and he will tell you frankly whether there is help for you in his ELECTRIC BELT. Consultation Free.

ADMISSION DAY.

THE CELEBRATION.

a Success-Grand Fireworks Display to Be Made at Catalina. Special Railroad Rates.

The General Committee of the Native Sons on the elebration of Admission day, held is regular weekly meeting Friday night at the office of W. T. Craig, and perfected several of the details of the celebration. The Fireworks Committee let the contract for the grand fireworks display and water carnival to take place on the evening of September 9 at Avalon, and a committee was appointed to arrange with the parties giving the display for the artistic lighting of the head-lands of the bay at Avalon, and for the anchoring of barges upon which the anchoring of barges upon which the set pieces will be given, also for the setting of the volcano to be placed upon Sugar Loaf. It was determined to purchase one thousand Japanese lanterns for decorative and lighting purposes at the headquarters of the Native Sons and the streets with the panel around the bay leading to them and around the bay

The Chamber of Commerce extended invitation to the Native Sons to the visiting Native Sons and all friends at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce on the evening of the 8th of September. The invitation was accepted and the committee arranged for music by the Marine Band for the evening and also for giving vocal the evening and also for giving vocal music and refreshments. Decorations were also provided for, and the general details were left to a committee composed of A. Ramish, H. C. Lichtenberger and A. A. Roth.

The committee closed its contract for one thousand souvenirs, the artistic work to be done by Behre, and appointed a committee to receive designs for badges for the members of the order and their guests. It was determined to spare no expense on the artistic work of the souvenir. the artistic work of the souvenir. The Press Committee reported that invitations containing the programme of events and rates had been sent to all the parlors and every Native Son in Southern California, and also to the principal parlors of the north, and to the grand officers of the opder, and other persons were to be invited. and other persons were to be invited by public announcement. The transportation committee reported that they had secured the best rates ever granted in Southern California. The granted in Southern California. The railroad and steamship companies have made the rate one and one-third the regular rate, except from San Diego and return, which will be $3. Tickets from San Diego and return will be good for thirty days from September 8, tickets from Santa Barbara and Ventura counties will be good and Ventura counties will be good from September 8 to 13, inclusive; tickets from all other parts of South-ear California will be good from Sep-tember 9 to 13, inclusive.

The most important part of the committee's report, however, was upon the rates from San Pedro to Catalina and return. There were three classes of tickets arranged for, all good from September 9 to 12, inclusive; first, from San Pedro to Catalina and return, $2: second, from San Pedro to Catalina and return with board and lodging in the Native Sons headquarters, in tents. $5.25. This ticket will be known as the Native Sons ticket and will be used by themselves and their friends generally, and will include the entire necessary expense of the trip to Cata-lina and return. Third, from San Pedro to Catalina and return, with accommodations at Hotel Metropole from September 9 to 12, inclusive, $8. One condition was made by the committee, however, that tickets for accommodations must be reserved before September 6. These rates are claimed to be so low that several thousand of the friends of the Native Sons are expected to take advantage of the outing and accompany the order to Catalina. San Diego has been granted a rate lower than ever before given for as long a time as thirty days, and it is expected that a very large num-ber of people will take advantage of

WHITTIER ESCAPE CAUGHT. Police Keeping a Sharp Lookout Local Hoodlums Arrested.

For days past the police officers have kept a watchful eye upon the young hoodlums about town, known and unknown, looking for escaped inmates from the Whittier Reform School. It is known that if possible every escape from Whittier makes his way to this city, and, going into the Tenderloin district, not only finds friends and shelter, but becomes a hero among the steam-beer-drinking, cigarette-smoking hoodlums of from 16 to 20 years of age who are natives of this city.

A number of arrests of young men, who closely resembled Whittier escapes, have been made during the past week and although they proved alibis, the officers were given an opportunity to learn all about numerous young hoodlums that have heretofore hung on the ragged edge of the law, while the cases of mistaken identity were given an opportunity to taste the pleasures of the City Jail.

Yesterday afternoon Officer Pauling arrested a sure-enough Whittier escape in the person of Elmer Perry. He ran against the boy on Macy street and started toward him when Perry started to run. After a chase of a half-mile the officer overtook the fugitive and brought him to the City Jail. He will be returned to Whittier on Monday, as he admits his identity. As to why he ran away, Perry has nothing to say, wisely adding: "Tve got to go back there, you know."

Thousands of Lottery Tickets.

The police yesterday afternoon raided Chinese stores at Nos. 415 and 417 North Los Angeles street and at No. 203 Ferguson alley and seized a wagonload of guson alley and seized a wagonload of Chinese lottery tickets. The officers have had a tip that a new lot of tickets would arrive to replace those seized and destroyed heretofore and have, in consequence, been keeping a sharp lookout on Chinatown. The tickets seized were packed in tea boxes, tin packing cases and bundles made up to represent merchandise.

All the tickets seized will be destroyed, and while the exact value of the property confiscated is not known to the police. Chinese say the unused tickets were worth hundreds of dollars.

The rider grinned. "It's too late to husk corn, anyhow. You South Carolinians are always about two months late." Suddenly his voice changed to a tone of joyous excitement, and he bent over the pommel of his saddle. "Say, the knights meet tonight."

"Shut up, you fool," said one."

The rider's voice sank to a mumble. "I don't know. Jim met me and told me the Dutch peddler had brought some news and said he wanted all the knights to be on hand."
"Where do we meet?"
"Jim Lyons's barn."
"Well. I'll tell you this—we've got to have a lot o' pickets out, for the niggers are excited. They have an idea something is going on that would interest them."
"Jim'll watch out fer that. Well, so long. Be on hand."
"We'll be there."
"As the young men turned toward the cornshocks the negroes fell to work with sudden attack. It was evident they had been listening. The country about St. Louis was at that time more secession than Union in feeling, and, though the farmers of the creek were pursuing their ways quietly, they were ready at any moment for an enterpursuing their ways quietly, they were ready at any moment for an enterprise in aid of the South. By a swift and decided stroke of military foresight, Frank P. Blair had captured Camp Jackson and its arsenal in May, thus saving the city and its munitions to the Union, but there had sprung up all over the country secret societies in sympathy with the South. These societies were branches of the famous in sympathy with the South. These societies were branches of the famous "Knights of the Golden Circle," and it was their hope that at some time they might be able to do some decisive work in aid of secession.

THE LODGE MEETS.

There was a lodge or circle in Gravois into which all the Confederate sympathizers were gathered, but thus far the southern cause owed them little. There was something in the sudden call for a meeting this November day, however, which convinced every eager knight that the time for action had at last come. Some deed was to do—what it was, no one could tell, save the peddler, but as the night grew thick, from every direction, on foot and on horseback, the men began to silently move through the cold, bleak air toward the rendezvous. The two young men of the cornshocks were brothers, Abner and Limri Taylor, They were both stalwart, bearded and very quiet in manner. At supper they uttered no word of the news brought to them, for black ears, keen as a hare's, were open to hear the lowest word. The blacks were already tremulous with excitement over the news of battles in the South, which some of them comprehended to mean that certain white men were fighting for them. Others merely felt sympathetically the tense anxiety of the time, which portended traile deeds. There was a restraint in the silence which Abrer's wife perceived. As he rose from the table that night he said to hear the news." There was a lodge or circle in Graof them comprehended to mean that certain white men were fighting for them. Others merely felt sympathetically the tense anxiety of the time, which portended trairic deeds. There was a restraint in the silence which Abber's wife perceived. As he rose from the table that night he said to his wife:

"I'm going down to the postoffice to hear the news."

"The young wife seized the moment to say:

"O, Abner, I hope it isn't any project of the knights."

"Be quiet." he said sharply. "You needn't worry if it is. I promise you I wouldn't go into service, and I won't—at least not know."

"Promise me not to do anything rash. Abner."

He smiled a little. "I don't have that reputation among the circle," he said. The younger brother grew impatient. "Oh, come along, Abner; we'll be late."

The young wife looked as if she were not so sure of Abner's caution, and she went about her work with a strong feeling that some great calamity was impending. Abner had alteready been under arrest for a rebellious act while on a visit to St. Louis, and she was easily alarmed now. She looked at the children with a glance which showed a sleepless fear for them as well as for her husband. What would they do without his big arm to protect them. By 7:30 the barn held a score of men of all ages and sizes, and dutside, a circle of pickets kept watch I that no prying negro came within late to of the signation. "You all know I've no love for Yankees; I would cut the heart out of Ryon all know I've no love for Cann the heart out of Ryon and heighbor. Why, I've seen him give his last $5 to a poor widow woman whose house was burnt down. You all remember Tom Har-tris's widow. Some o' you fellers hauled 'props' with him, and now when the trusts us and comes home here without a bodyguard he expects to be treated like a gentleman. broad visage. He plunged into the plan at once.

"Brothers, we have a chance to rob the northern armies of a brigadlergeneral. Gen. U. S. Grant of Cairo is home on a leave of absence. He drove out today without a guard. Nobody with him. He's at old man Dent's, which is not more than two miles from here. You all know the place. He will be there all night. My plan is to surround the house and seize him while he is asleep. The union cause will have on brigadier-general less."

Two or three of the younger hot heads leaped up, white with excitement.

heads leaped up, white with excitement.

"Good! That's the plan! We'll make him pay for Belmont."

The boldness of the scheme took the cooler men at a disadvantage. Before they could gather their limbs under them another belligerent was in the middle of the floor blazing with excitement, his words a volley. "It is a glorious opportunity to serve the cause of the South. We have been organized for just such work as this. Now is our chance. I will be one to do this work tonight."

is our chance. I will be one to do this work tonight."
"So will I," said one at his side.
"And I," shouted several more.
"The chairman uttered a warning hiss—"Sh!—don't yell." For an instant it seemed as if the whole lodge were ready for this bold plan, but a dissentient voice made itself heard at last; some one shouted, "Hold on a minute," and when the rest had time to look about to see who had spoken, Abner Taylor was seen standing in the Abner Taylor was seen standing in the background. A DISSENTING VOICE.

The big corn-husker looked grim-and threatening as he stepped forward and flung his hat on the floor as valiantly flung his hat on the floor as valiantly as any knight ever cast his glove.
"I vote no! Now, see here, neighbors, I want at word right now. I know this Gen. Grant. I've cut wood and hauled 'props' with him. He has ead dinner in our house many a time. You all know him, and you know that a better man never lived in this town. He's a gentleman and an honorable soldier, and I don't propose to kidnap a man like that under such circumstances. Why, the man trusts us! You says he has no bodyguard. Well, I'll be one of his bodyguards." The big fellow towered like a giant in his indignation.

"You all know I've no love for Yandisturbed tonight, and he goes back to St. Louis and 'Cairo undisturbed. If he is killed or captured, let it be done by Gen. Pillow or Gen. Buckner, in a fair and square fight."

The meeting ended right there. The hot heads apologized, and the peddler slunk away. "Ab, that was a big speech you made," said the younger brother, as they went across the fields. "You're right, but it's a terrible tempetation. Grant seems to be going up steadily, but Pillow will attend to him."

Our Northern Friends.

[Stockton Mail:] Society in Los Angeles is wondering how it shall receive the Bradburys if they come back. Society seems totake itself as seriously as if its seal set on or withheld from the Bradburys would make a speck of difference in the character of those young people. The Bradburys were in society before they went away—and if one may believe the southern papers "the 400" of Los Angeles is not a thing to be proud of—and they were then precisely what they are now; no better no worse. If society feels that it has any stones to throw that are not needed right at home, let it heave them at the Bradburys, but otherwise it might be a good scheme for it to go right on minding its own business. It may be that the Bradburys will not be craving the delights of tsociety for awhile. It is just possible that they

ANY of the best-known portraits purporting to be accurate likenesses of our great men and women are nothing more nor less than apocryphal. Not only are these pictures unauthentic, but, in many cases, portraits of other well-known personages have been used to supply the deficiency."

Thus vigorously spoke Charles Henry Hart of Philadelphia, justly looked upon by art connoisseurs as the Supreme Court of Appeal in all questions touching the genuineness of historical portraits. Mr. Hart has made this original Octonnor, who commanded the lrish guides under Napoleon, and passed this off as a picture of Lee. The original Octonnor painting hung for

GLARING EXAMPLES OF FRAUD IN OUR NATIONAL PORTRAITURE

Birch of Philadelphia and concluded that it must be by Henry Bone of London. He even goes so far as to explain the initials W. B. by saying that the W. must_have been changed from an H. during the process of firing.

"My good friend, the late Sir George Scharf, keeper of the National Portrait Gallry, London, discovered many apocerphal portraits doing duty in England. For instance, he found portraits of Lord Clifford of Chudleigh, Charles II's Lord Chancellor doing duty in several places as a likeness of the Duke of Monmouth, as the Earl of St. Albans and as Lord Maynard. There is no picture of Christopher Columbus in existence, and in Greenwich Hospital, Sir George found a picture of Columbus which on being scraped was found to have been originally a supposed likeness of Christ. This great English connoisseur also found a portrait of Mrs. G. Hodges doing duty as Princess Carcline of Brunswick and as Mrs. Fitzherbert. The poet Ovid in one case became Sir Ashton Cockyne, A picture of Col. Bell has done duty as the Duke of Wellington and Dr. Hughes, Bishop of St. Asaph. In fact, as I have intimated above, the list of apocryphal portraits is very long, and must, in the ceurse of events, become very much longer, inasmuch as the eye of the expert is constantly detecting misguided efforts of the earlier painters to supply the deficiency which apparently existed in the portraiture of great men of the past."

The above statements, coming from Mr. Hart, have a definite, historic value. They are not based on mere supposition, but in every case his judgment is the result of legal evidence; that is, the evidence on which the pictures are judged is only such as would be admitted in a court of law. Inasmuch as Mr. Hart is by profession a lawyer, his judgment is recognized by his colleagues to be all the more profound. His experience as a critic is life-long. Even at the age of 12 he was the proud recipient of a personal letter from Rembrandt Peale on his portrait of Washington, so that he is himself in a measure historic. All his life long, he has indulged his fine taste for art, and his reputation is really international. At the request of Prof. Robertson Smith of Edinburgh, he wrote for the last edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the articles on Philadelphia and Gilbert Stuart. He is in close communication with the authorilies of the London National Gallery, upon subjects germane to those art Institutions. Recently the Swedish National Museum of Art at Stockholm has applied to Mr. Hart for information relating to the works of Wertmuller, the distinguished Hart for information relating to the works of Wertmuller, the distinguished Swedish painter. His careful and exact investigations into the works of American artists have resulted in the virtual discovery to the present reagration of many forgotten and unknown men, especially Jouett, a true genius in portrait painting, and Browere, in sculpture. The obligations of writers to Mr. Hart is fully shown by the acknowledgments of Clarence Cook, William S. Baker, Miss Wharton and many others in the pages of their published volumes. He is the author of many magazine articles on art subjects, a brief biography and, bibliography of Abraham Lincoln and of other books of a historic character.

He was chairman of the Committee on Retrospective Art, for the World's Columbian Exposition, and he was the only, non-resident member of the New York Committee of the centennial celebration of the inauguration of Washington as President of the United States. Mr. Hart was born in 1844, and in his veins runs the best blood of several nations. He is a graduate of Pennsylvania and during his professional life some of the most valuable interests in Philadelphio have been entrusted to his care. He resides in an attractive country home in the suburbs of the Quaker City.

Making Macaroni.

The art of making macaroni, says the Retail Grocers' Advocate, involves a somewhat intricate at tedious process—that is, American macaroni. The ingredients consist of farina made from the very best of hard wheat. The grain is reduced to five different grades, and then mixed in one common quality.

The paste is first put through a mixer, then in a circular trough, around which a two-ton granite roller revolves. When thoroughly rolled it is lined around the sides of another circular trough and two cone shaped cog wheels knead and cut the paste in pieces, taking out the flaky veina, From the grinder the paste is ready to go to the cylinders, which turn it out perfect maccaroni.

It is put in at the top of a round cylinder, the interior of a Galling gun or the cylinder of a revolver. Through these holes in the maccaroni. As it comes out of the bottom of the cylinder the man operating the machine spreads it over a clean board and when a certain length has been spun out it is cut up and laid aside to allow more to follow. This is placed on drying boards on an upper floor, and for ten days it is kept on these boards, when it is ready for boxing and selling.

engraved certificate which you can show to your grandchildren as a pleasing memento of your participation in a notable movement.

A good many citizens have a taste for these engravings. They are so fraught with agreeable memories in after years.

In selecting a certificate wo points should be borne in mim. First, the color. We are told by a very experienced gentleman who has made a large collection of certificates from South Africa, Cripple Creek and Montana, that the light-brown engravings, while they take the eye at first, are apt to fade. His advice is to insist ubon a rather dark shade of green as being the most lasting. The next consideration is size. Always get as large a certificate as possible, and peremptorily reject those which are less than thirty inches in length. As to costyou can get just as pretty and lasting a certificate for $1 as you can for $1000.

Largest Floating Drydock.

[New York Commercial Advertiser:]
A new floating drydock has just been completed at Hamburg, in connection with the shipyard and machine shops of Messrs. Blohm & Voss. The American Consul. Robertson, who reports the fact, says that it is "the largest to lits kind in existence." It has a carrying capacity of 17,500 tons. Its length, with the pontoons, is 624 feet to lite and the pontoons, is 624 feet to lite and shoes; then there is the heaviest men-of-war. Owing to lite peculiar construction, the dock, in time of war, or in case of other emergency, could be taken down the river like a boat. The dock will take vessels with a draught of twenty-nine feet six and a half inches. No vessel with a greater draught than twenty-seven and a half feet has ever succeeded in reaching Hamburg.

Thus we have embodied in one little animal, averaging in size from three to five feet in height, meat, drink, shoes, clothing, and the means of transportation, not to mention his possibilities as a commercial commodity, for his hoors and horns make the best glue known, and his hair has a buoyant quality which makes it valuable for life-saving apparatus. In addition to all this, he is the only useful animal that can live upon such frugal fare as the Alaskan climate affords., Dogs must carry their food on their backs, but reindeer feed from the soll which they traverse; and it is estimated that the Territory of Alaska is capable of sustaining 9,200,000 of the latter animals, a number which will support 287,000 people.

The only difficulty in the matter is the fact that the reindeer have to he

"CAINST WIND AND TIDE. By Nelle Talbot Kinkead. (Thicago and New York: Rand, McNally & Co.)

THE story of the human heart, is well and graphically old in these pages. The author has been a close student of human nature and the imputes which govern it. She nas sounded the deeps of human feeling, and the strength and intensity of an over-weening affection. The story is a tragedy of love—the story of a woman's life darkened for years by the death of her young husband, slains a cording to the code of honor which exists in the South. The one who fought with him had been a friend, but in his own self-defense he strikes the blow which resulted in the death of his friend. The young wife holds him as a murderer and swears that her husband's death shall be avenged. Pley years later she meets the man upon whom, she has aworn vengeance, and finds in him all those qualities that compel a woman's admiration. Here the sad tragedy and pathos of tender battling with the strength of his strong nature, the viclestiude through which they pass, the revival of hope, the bitterness of deepath in battling with the strength of his strong nature, the viclestiude through which they pass, the revival of hope, the bitterness of deepath in battling with the strength of his strong nature, the viclestiude through which they pass, the revival of hope, the bitterness of deepath in the strength of his strong nature, the viclestiude through which they pass, the revival of hope, the bitterness of deepath in the strength of his strong nature, the viclestiude through which we see thronging the business streets of a great city know how the other half of his prevention of the life that is hidden in the byways and alleys, the tenement is where powerly has sway, and the hard, grinding treadmill of existence is passed. see thronging the business streets of a great city know how the other half of the life that is hidden in the byways and alleys, the tenements and underground cellars that exist where peverty has sway, and the hard, grinding treadmill of existence is passed. Like a strong searchlight thrown upon these hidden corners is the volume before us. It is a pictorial record of personal experiences by day and night in the great metropolis of this free republic, and it contains hundreds of thrilling anecdotes and incidents, sketches of life and character, humorous stories, touching home scenes and tales of tender pathos, drawn from the bright and shady sides of the great under world of New York.

In this new and superbly-illustrated work a noble Christian woman tells the thrilling story of her personal experience in gospel, temperance, mission and rescue work in a great city. No recent publication is now commanding so much attention nor has any other called forth such ringing words of "god-speed" from ministers and eminent women. It has been preached about from famous pulpits, read by tens of thousands of subscribers, and made the subject of many a clergyman's Sunday evening lecture. Its authorship is fourfold, its four authors being no less than Mrs. Helen Campbell, Rev. Lyman Abbott. D.D., Col. Thomas W. Knox and Inspector Thomas Byrnes, Chief of the New York Detective Bureau.

Mrs. Campbell, the principal writer, certainly was a woman commissioned of God, and "In His Name" spent many years as a city missionary literally "In Darkest New York." What a wonderful work she did. How devoted and blessed her labors were. It is a story never to be forgotten. This unique volume presents these thrilling experiences of Christian endeavor with the hundreds of pathetic and amusing scenes that were packed into them; it portrays life in a great city by day and by night "As Seen by a Woman." it shows the power of the gospel to redeem souls from the lowest depths; it gives striking testimonies of the redeemed, and from all these rich and after incident, story after story, and the reader's attention is held breathless to the end of the volume. "Strange but most suggestive is the fact," says Bishop Coxe in warmly commending this volume, "that Christ is to be visited in these dens and dives; there are those whom He will bear in mind when He says: "Ye visited me;" or, when He says: "Ye visited me;" or, when He says: "Ye did it not to Me."

Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott's life-long interest in city mission work, and his personal share in that work, preëminently fitted him to write for 'bis book. In his introduction to it he says:
"My interest in these phases of city life dates from my college days. From that day to this—over a third of a century—I have continued the studies then begun, and the subject of this book has been one of the great subjects of my study—sometimes in literature, often in life."

One of the most absorbingly interesting portions of the book is that written by Inspector Byrnes giving the ripe experience of thirty years of detective life. Many of the startling revelations he makes are taken from his private diary. They have never before been published.

This fascinating volume is indeed a wonderful tale of Christian love and faith, all alive with intense and striking reality. The best of it is that it is a pure and elevating book from beginning to end—a volume for the family circle. On this point the words of ten children) and Rev. Dr. Magoun, president Iowa College, are worth quoting here. Dr. Twichell who has a family of the purchase out the story of the continuence of the purchase of the purchase resident Jowa College, are worth quoting here. Dr. Twichell writes: "My wife says that she is going to set our young people on the book right off, for the good it will do them:" and President Magoun says: "My family finds, when other books on our shelves lack interest, this one always holds and rewards attention."

interest, this one always holds and rewards attention."

It contains 252 superb engrayings, every one of them made from photographs from life, mostly by flash-light. Every face is a portrait, every scene a stern reality. In looking at these splendid illustrations the reader sees at a glance just how Gospel work is carried on by day and by night by rescue bands; he is shown strange sights in out-of-the-way places that are rarely or never seen by the casual visitor; he is taken into cheap lodging-houses and cellars; into the houses of the poor; into newsboys lodging-houses; into the police and detective departments, etc.—nothing seems to be omitted.

"In a word," says the Mail and Express, "an expedition sent out by the University of Pennsylvania in 1888 to explore Lower Babylon has unearthed a great city, Nippur, which at some time in the past played as important a part in civilization as in after years was done by Babylon, Rome or London; which had a language, civilization and literature of high development, and whose history runs back to at least ten thousand years ago. The achievement is so great that it will require at least a decade to understand and anyeciate it, its entirety. his explorations on the Euphrates, be-least ten thousand years ago. The achievement is so great that it will require at least a decade to understand and appreciate it in its entirety. Its consequences are numerous and far-reaching. It shows that the ancient priest Berosus understated the facts in his historical writings and was not 'a lying babbler,' as has been taught for centuries.

"It shows, secondly, that civilization is far older upon this globe than was ever dreamed of by our colleges. It seemed wonderful when Egyptology carried civilization back 6000 years, when Assyriologists almost demonstrated that the begnnings of Akkad were 6500 years ago, when Jeering showed that the Indio-European family had been in Europe probably eight thousand years ago, and when sinalogues carried Chinese history back 5000 years. If these were great achievements what shall be said of the work Jogues carried chinese instory back 5000 years. If these were great achievements, what shall be said of the work which gives us a record of at least two thousand years more than the largest, with the probability that the 2000 will be 4000 or 5000 years. The discovery shows that in those dim ages there were government, law, courts there were government, law, courts largest, with the probability that the 2000 will be 4000 or 5000 years. The discovery shows that in those dim ages there were government, law, courts, schools, libraries, trade, commerce, public enterprise; that devotion and religion, hope, faith and righteousness were as active instrumentalities in the conduct of life then as they are at the present time; that there were poets, orators and law-givers equal to Homer, Demosthenes or Moses thousands of years before these immortals were born.

"Nippur had a language Semitic in character and like its cognates, Hebrew, Arabic, Babylonian and Minaean, rich, sonorous and expressive. Military science was well developed; the precious metals were employed in financial transactions; astronomy, architecture, medicine, music, agriculture, irrigation, the domestic arts and the rudimentary sciences had reached a stage of comparative development. The discovery but confirms the accepted theory that for many thousand years the large territory of which the rivers Tigris and Euphrates are the twin axes was the theater of a teeming population of milliones, rich, prosperous and industrious, and that the present wilderness is due to the destructive agency of countless wars and, above all, to the cruelty and corruption of the Moslem rule. The city of Nippur played an important part in the development of Babylonia, or rather of that larger district known as Mesopotamia. Beyond its wealth and culture, its military prowess and glory, it enjoyed for centuries the distinction of being a great religious center. Dr. Peters well expresses the fact when he says: "The temple of Bel at Nippur was to the religion of Babylonia and Assyria very much whât the temple of Jerusalem was to our own religion. So far as nations are concerned this temple is the oldest temple in the world. It exercised a prodigious influence at a period as much prior to the time of Abraham as the time of Abraham is prior to our day."

one of Walt Whitman's Friends.

The London Dally Chronicle, after lamenting that true friendship is so rarely celebrated in modern literature, makes an exception in favor of Walt Whitman:

"A little volume now before us—'Calamus; a Series of Letters written during the years 1868-1880 by Walt Whitman to a young friend (Peter Doyle)'—which has been edited, with an introduction, by one of Whitman's literary executors, Dr. R. M. Bucke, and published by Laurens Maynard of Boston, gives a charming picture of 'the dear love of man for his comrade.' The publication of these letters realizes a hope expressed some years ago by the late Addington Symonds in his study of Whitman to a young man, whom I will call P., and who was tenderly beloved by him. It is greatly to be hoped that they may be published. They breathe a purity and simplicity of affection, a naiveté and réasonableness, which are very remarkable considering the unmistakable intensity of the emotion. Throughout them Whitman shows the wiesst care for his young friend's welfare, helps him in material ways, and bestows upon him the best advice, the heartiest encouragement, without betraying any sign of patronage or preaching. I regret that we do not possess P.'s answers. Yet, probably, to most readers, they would not appear highly interesting: for it is clear he was only an artless and uncultured workman."

"Artless and uncultured though he may have been, P.—Peter Doyle, car conductor on Pennsylvania avenue, Washington—gave Dr. Bucke a wordpleture of 'Walt' which for vividness and sincere feeling many professors of art and culture might envy:

"You ask where I first met him? It is a curious story. We fell to each other at once. I was a conductor. The night was very stormy. Walt had his blanket—it was thrown round his shoulders—he seemed like an old sea captain. He was the only passenger, it was a lonely night, so I thought I would go in and talk with him. Something in me made med oit, and something in him derw me that way. He used to say there was something in me ways at fight. He rode round wit me on the last trip—sometimes rode fc several trips. Everybody knew hin He had a way of taking the measur of the driver's hand—had caffski gloves made for them every winter i Georgetown—these gloves were his per sonal presents to men. He saluted the men on the other cars as we passed—threw up his hand. They cried to him 'Hullo, Walt!' and he would reply, 'Ah there!' or something like. He was welcome always as the flowers in May.'"

Some More "Best" Poems.

We have commented on several of the lists of the best ten short poems which have been the craze of late, but have neglected Life's list prepared which have been the craze of late, but have neglected Life's list prepared by popular vote, which is quite as remarkable in its way as those of Mr. Dana and Mr. Stoddard, though to be sure the way is somewhat different. Here is the choice of the multitude: "Elegy in a Country Graveyard." Gray: "Thanatopsis," Bryant: "Psalm of Life," Longfellow; "The Raven," Poe; "Charge of the Light Brigade," Tennyson: "The Skylark," Shelly: "The Chambered Nautilus," Holmes; "Maud Muller," Whittler: "The Bridge of Sighs," Hood: "The Burial of Sir John Moore," Wolfe.

It is a very credible list, but it comes even further from including the ten best short poems than do the lists of individual students of letters. But at least these ten may fairly be ranked among the most popular of poems in the English language. It is probable that no list could be prepared which would really embrace the ten best poems, because there are so many different standards of Judgment. In this connection the remarks of George W. Cable in Current Literature are of interest. After speaking of Mr. Dana's choice as "the furthest possible from being convincing," Mr. Cable says:

"They were of interest really only interest. After speaking of Mr. Dana's choice as "the furthest possible from being convincing." Mr. Cable says:

"They were of interest really only because offered by a man distinguished as a literateur as well as an editor, and himself a writer of poetry in his youth. Shortly after Mr. Dana's list was printed, Richard Henry Stoddard made ten selections from American poets, and ten from the British, but his poems failed to include any of the Sun's ten. Inspired by this difference of opinion, a prominent newspaper syndicate at once sought the choice of 500 professional men. including authors, editors, poets and philosophers. The result of this latest contest, in which the ten poems receiving the greatest number of votes were selected, has just been published. Not one of the ten is to be found among Mr. Stoddard's twenty. And now one of the best dallies in the land decides that what is the greatest in poetry may be settled by rules formulated by the lexicographer' (which we deny), but that 'the best poetry, like beauty, must ever remain a matter of individual selection. No man may decide for another. O dear! we deny that also, It is no more true of poetry than of painting, or of the different makes of a musical instrument that 'each must answer for himself the question' which is, or are, best. We may each say which we like best; that is another matter: but to say which we should like best if we knew better, is something the expert critic can answer far more wisely for most men than they can answer for themselves."

John Hay's writings in London.

John Hay's Writings in London. Col. Hay's appointment as Ambas-sador has brought about a marked

"boom" for his writings, especially in England. A new edition of his works is now bring published, and the London papers are full of flattering estimates of his whyck, showing that letters and diplomady together can do much more for fame than either of them taken separately. Every young man who wishes to succeed as an author should get himself appointed an ambassador at once. He will find it helpful in his profession. One of the London papers, after reviewing Col. Hay's work at some length, says:

"Just as Longfellow enjoys among us less reputation than is his due, through the fattal popularity of some of his earlier and commonplace work—"Exalesion" and "A Psaim of Life," for example—so Col. Hay's genuine gift of delicate poetic expression is very apt to be forgotten in the very vividness of our recollection of the free-living and heroically-dying Bludso. Our Ambassador writes chelly yers de societe, lyries of modern sentiment, wrapped round modern instances, delicate, introspective, and—with the occasional exception of that so-called "cockney rhyme" which is offensive to English ear—fine in workmanship. Indeed, there is much in Col. Hay's poems that remind us of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, who is, in America, what Austin Dobson is in England, with some vigor added."

An editorial in Leslie's Weekly calls attention to the growing ignorance of great literature among the younger class of readers:

The New York Independent printed not long ago a striking article by the president of a western university in which he related a certain literary experience of his with one of his senior classes. He took the works of Tennyson, culled from them a mass of scriptural allusions, and asked the class what these allusions meant. The ignorance of these young men was pitiful. "Pearls Before Swine," "Jephthah's Daughter," "Mirlam," "Joshua at Ajalon," none of these conveyed any significance to more than a few of this class of "educated" young men.

The repository of general information and general literature common to all educated people, instead of growing larger, seems to dwindle. In many refined homes can be quoted, without recognition by young people of college age, lines from Hamlet's soliloquies, from Wordsworth "Immortality," from Miltons' sonnet on his blindness, from Myordsworth "Immortality," from Miltons' sonnet on his blindness, from Myordsworth "Immortality," from Miltons' sonnet on his blindness, from Myordsworth "Immortality," from Miltons' sonnet on his blindness, from Myordsworth Riley and Stephen Crane and Kilpling can atone for ignorance of these old immortal compositions. Read both the old and the new if you can, and see to if that they are familiar in your homes; but if you cannot know both kinds, by all means take the old.

[Written for Boston Ideas.] A marked honor has recently been conferred upon James Eugene Farmer, whose "Essays on French History" have received such distinguished recognition in Paris that he has been ognition in Paris that he has been elected to membership in the Société de l'Histoire de la Revolution Francaise." This society is composed of a number of eminent Frenchmen, and has as president M. Jules Claretie, a member of the French Academy.

Master of Arts from that institution in 1894.

Mr. Farmer's "Essays on French History" (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1897,) deal with the rise of the reformation in France, and with the Club of the Jacobins. Concerning this work the New York Review of Reviews has the following comment:

"These two essays are the fruit of much study of historical authorities, and the author's manner of presenting the important themes of which he treats, is both inspiring and convincing."

treats, is both inspiring and convincing."

The Ohio State Journal also says:

"James Eugene Farmer has just published two essays on French history, which entitle him to a place among the modern school of philosophers of history. The first essay is "The Rise of the Reformation in France," a subject in itself difficult of mastery because of the great number of influences which conspired from the days of Charlemagne toward the conditions that finally made the reformation a necessity. Prof. Farmer's essay shows great research, and a treatment which may be considered masterful considering the condensation necessary. The second essay is on "The Club of the Jacobins, the famous organization which rose above the wreck of the old regime and became for a time the chief power in the condensation of the publication of the states, that by the publication is of the stretches the subscription list of the stricks the says, is on the club of the Jacobins, the famous organization which rose above the wreck of the old regime and became for a time the chief power in the club of the states, that by the publication of the states, that by the publication of the states, that by the publication is trained to the states, that by the publication of the states and the conditions that the states are the states and the conditions that the state of the states and the conditions that the states are the states and the conditions that the states are the states and the conditions that the states are the states and the conditions that the states are the states and the conditions that the states are the states and the conditi the famous organization which rose above the wreck of the old regime and became for a time the chief power in France. This es by shows no less exhaustive research and in a pleasing style adds another picture of the closing scenes of the eighteenth century."

Mr. Farmer is master in history and English literature in St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H. He has been for a number of years a student of the Napoleonic era, and a spirited ballad from his pen, entitled "The Hussar's Song," appeared in the August number of Current Literature. This poem has much of the dash that characterizes Kipling and portrays the death of a French soldier at the battle of Jena. Mr. Farmer has in preparation other literary works, and among them a historical romance, the scenes of which are laid in France at the time of the first empire.

Few writers display Mr. Farmer's historical judgment, and combine such skilled literary workmanship with equal dramatic power. His style is simple, yet stately: terse, yet picturesque and graphic. He outlines a historical personage with a few bold strokes and sums up historical events in a brilliant

J. Passmore Edwards has signified his intention of erecting a bronze medallion portrait of Leigh Hunt in the Public Library at Shepherd's Bush, Eng. The library was built at the expense of Mr. Edwards, and is dedicated to the memory of Leigh Hunt and Charles Keene, whose last years were spent in the parish of Hammersmith. The work will be intrusted to G. Frampson, A.R.A. One of the most interesting features of Harper's Magazine for September will be an article on George du Maurier, by Henry James, giving an intimate view of the artist and writer. Other attractive features will be: "The Beginnings of the American Navy," by James Barnes; installments of the serial stories by Frank R. Stockton and John Fox, Jr.; and a humorous romance of the golf links, "The Leep Bally by W. Stockton and John Fox, Jr.; and a

A curious illustration of the "luck" with which some books meet is shown in the history of Henry Seton Merriman's novel, "The Grey Lady." The first edition was brought out among the holiday issues of 1895, and, although the book was favorably received by the reviewers, it evidently received but little attention from the reading public, as for eighteen months the first edition was sufficient to meet all demands. About the middle of last month, however, a second edition was published by the Macmillan Company, with a specially designed covering ray and gold by George Wharton Edwards. This edition was sold out almost immediately, and orders have already been received for fully half of the third edition, which is published this week.

The London Literary World, commenting on the departure of Moncure D. Conway with his family for New York, where he will reside for the fusture, says: "No man probably is better known in literary circles on both sides of the Atlantic than Dr. Conway, who numbered among his frierids such men as Carlyle, Rossetti, Emyrson, Whitman and Holmes. He has been a frequent attendant at New Vagabond Club functions, where he has more than once delivered a splendid speech. His departure necessitates the dispersal of some rare art and literary treasures, which, with the exception of some gifts to the South-Place Society, will be disposed to during the month (July) by Mours. Sotheby."

McClure's Magazine for September will contain a thoroughly practical and useful article on "Life in the Klondyke Gold Fields." It embodies the personal observations of a pioneer who has lately come out, bringing a fair fortune with him, and it tells how the miners enter and work their claims, how they pass their leisure time. It tells also what is the best way to the Klondyke, what the best equipment for the journey and a year's residence there, and what promise of prosperity the country actually "offers. The article will be fully illustrated-from recent photographs.

Alex Cameron put in a new fireplace

Alex Cameron put in a new fireplace in his cabin last week, but he will now have to build another one. After he had completed it he built a roaring fire and there was so much metal in the stone that it melted and ran all over the floor. He now has a gold-plated floor, but no fireplace.

The high wind yesterday raised considerable dust. Jack Buckinbill, who was out on the Eldorado road with his team, says he was nearly blinded by it. When he came home he coughed up $73.89. One of our greatest needs is street sprinkling.

Large numbers of dead catfish are seen floating in the river every day. When examined, it is found that every one of them has from six to eight ounces of gold dust in its stomach. This carelessness in allowing loose gold to escape into the river will ruin the fishing unless stopped.

The Widow Larkin yesterday met with a misfortune which will, we are sure, call forth the sympathy of the public. During the heavy rainstorm in the afternoon a regular torrent rushed down the gully back of her house, and washed so much gold dust into her pig sty that the pig was smothered. A subscription has been started for her benefit.

We shall sing as you might hear our people sing in the South and Southwest of our country. One of our songs is entitled, 'Oh, I Don' Know, You are Not so Wa'm, meaning, 'Oh, I'm not so certain, you are not so many, you are not so great.' We shall also do some buck-dancing, or, as you call it, a regular darkey hoedown.' After I'd said all that a few nights the Englishmen began to get used to us. They would come a second time watching for our jokes, and you'd see them watching for the jokes they remembered. 'Wait a bit, he's going to do it,' they would say; 'he's going to say something right jolly in a moment; now it's coming; now, ah!—there you are; isn't that capital; isn't it great?' Then the friends would bring their friends, and we got to know our audience. They always wanted the same things over again, being in this particular entirely dif-terent from an American audience which always demands something

Mrs. Potter and Kyrle Bellew are now on their way from Australia to London, where they will occupy the Shaftesburg Theater for several months, probably opening in an elaborate Shakespearean revival, and about October 15 will present a new comedy. They were due in London about four months ago, but their success in Australia has been of such a stupendous nature that their pilgrimage has been delayed. They are recalling a story of Mrs. Potter's early career. When she took to the boards members of her family implored her to take another designation and not contaminate the name of a reverend bishop by associating it with the stage. TRAVELING CAPE.

In silver plates, dishes, etc., the newest designs have open-work borders, some times of floral design, others of plain or platted rope patterns. Some of them remind one of the old-fashioned china placques, through whose edges colored ribbons were passed. Small waiters of this style have heavily carved centers, and are all perched on silver balls or ornamental claws as feet. In the handles of spoons, forks and ladles this platted pattern is shown, but the manufacturers profess to believe that they will only be popular as novelties, and not as staple goods.

The newest things in silver-mounted glass show staghorn handles. The effect, aside from being entirely new, is both beautiful and elegant. The majority of pieces so ornamented are intended for the use of men, and are particularly appropriate. A large punch bowl of heavy glass in a combination of prism and diamond-cut is mounted on a stand of solid silver. The rim of the bowl is burnished silver, the lower edge with a narrow carving, and there are five handles of staghorn mounted in silver. Another large piece of similar cut-glass with silver chasing, is a loving cup, having two handles of staghorn. The A TYPICAL WORKING GIRL. The Machine Teacher-Her Opportunity of Going About. CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES. There aren't many machine teachers in the field yet and competition isn't so fierce as it might be nor wages low. Whether the pay is good or the occupation desirable depends altogether on what you've been brought up to expect of life. If you've graduated from the ranks of the ordinary machine operators who work by the piece ten hours a day, for from $4 to $7 a week, you think it a piecesof tare good luck to get $12 and all your expenses, board and railroad, steamship fares, and the opportunity of seeing the country.

board and railroad, steamship fares, and the opportunity of seeing the country.

One girl employed in showing folks how to make cigars by machine has traveled all over the continent and has had two trips to Europe since she became a machine teacher four years ago. She is very young, not quite 23. When she is at home she lives in a little country city in a tiny cottage under a hill. There is a plano in the parlor, an ingrain carpet on the floor, a few cane rockers, an upholistered chair or two, a few photographs and books. Roses grow up over the porches, there are beds of cld-fashioned flowers and a tiny garden patch that the mother and younger sister and brother tend with care, while they wait with pride the home-coming of the beloved bread-winner.

Perhaps it is "the all things sweet" about this home that makes the machine teacher almost regret that the occupation requires so much traveling. "It's very much better pay than I can get at anything else I can do," she says, "and so I must stick to it, because, you see, where there are four of us and only two working, all the money we can lay hands on comes in handy. she says, "and so I must stick to it, because, you see, where there are four of us and only two working, all the money we can lay hands on comes in handy. It's very lonely, though, being away among strangers so much." I don't like hotels, and being in a boardjng-house in a strange-place isn't much better.— I don't get among the kind of people I've been used to all my life, and I'm not like some girls who are always wishing they could get acquainted with fine folks. My folks are all working people, and all my acquaintances at home are, too. And they go to my church, and are of my nationality. That seems to make a difference. My cousin, who is a writer, says she feels it, too, only she calls it having the same background. Whatever it is, I miss my acquaintances in the ladies' auxiliary of the A. O. H. and the young ladies' sodality almost as much as my home. The first time I went to England I went first cabin, with the man that owns the new patent and his wife, and, gracious, wasn't I lonely and uncomfortable? They were kind as could be, too. I wished I had gone in the steerage. I felt as if I could have talked to the people there. I suppose I could take just as many baths as they do—the cabin folks, I mean—and I'm American enough, even if we're only a generation or two out from Ireland, to feel that we are just as good as they are, but I wasn't at ease. My clothes wern't the same sort, and I hadn't had the same chances at school. I can play the plano and sing a little, but I don't like the same things they do, Their acquaintances seemed to think me a new sort of animal, or else I got so morbidly homesick I thought so. supply the need. The earliest examples were used by the famous Paris bookbinders and consist of simple though clumsy crowns of roses, myrtles and bay leaves or of harps, miters, etc. The most famous tail and head pieces of this period, possibly a little later, were those of Louis Luce, type-founder to Louis XV. These designs, which are without exception exceedingly forbidding, were declared by Luce to be perfect in every respect. And he never lost an opportunity to boast of them. The best examples of early English head and tail pieces can be seen in the caxton books. While of German artists, those of Albert Duer rank first. These are less clumsy than those of Luce, and are perhaps the first to show any direct connection with the text they were used to ornament. Early in the eighteenth century hollow initial text they were used to ornament. Early in the eighteenth century hollow initial letters came into favor along with head and tail pieces, and vere used in sets. These initials consisted of ornamental borders, whose letters could be changed at will. be illustrative, though they should in a measure have some significant connection with the text they were designed to ornament. He saw, the difference between appropriate decoration and illustration. His selections of the Tory borders and of the Holbein and Duer designs in the Queen Elizabeth prayer book show an enlightenment of taste and appreciation of the text he sought to decorate. Charlotte Whittington's designs, engraved by Mary Byfield, are among the most famous of this period. Many of them were used in Bell and Daldy's Elzevir and pocket volume series. Hundreds of these early head and tail pieces can be seen in the Plantin-Moretus museum and in the collection of the Oxford. University Press.

For modern illustrations of the art perhaps the best may be seen in the publications of Copeland & Day. These head and tall pieces are all of them works of art in their way, and many of them show the initials of some of our best known artists, both English and American. The publications of the Groller club also show fine illustrations of the work, many of their head and tail pieces, together with their accompanying initials, beling designed by members of this famous club.

The best work of American artists is shown in the bocks of Howard and Katherine Pyle, who illustrated and ornamented their own writings. For works of Boston designers, who have a particular school of their own, Mr. Berkley Updike's publications in the Merry Mount Press perhaps give the be illustrative, though they should in

While the best designers of head and tail pieces among living women artists are Margaret and Helen Armstrong and Amy Richards, all of them American women who make a specialty of this branch of their art. For pamphlets and cheaper classes of magazines and books, dies of head and tail pieces are furnished by the type foundries. These, of course, have no connection with the books or articles they are used to ornament, and are frequently used merely as space fillers—as, for instance, when an article in one of these shoddy magazines does not fill a page, in preference to leaving a blank space, a tail piece, more or less elaborate, is used. There is no connection between the design of the tail piece and the text of the article, the only object being to fill a blank space. With the high class publications, of course, such is not the case, as the head and tail pieces used are especially designed for the article, and have an indirect connection with the text.

HEAD AND TAIL PIECES.

Their History. Their Purport and Value as a Means of Livelihood.

The designing of head and tail pieces for books as a branch of art is often overlooked or forgotten, possibly because the general public have become as accustomed to seeing these little sketches at the beginning and ends of a volume as the words preface and finis. But, like every other branch of art and their work are as well known as the famous artists in themore conspicuous fields.

Its history and growth are traced directly from the illuminated manuscripts of the old monks. Many of these manuscripts show sketches, more or less claborate, at their beginning and ends. The earliest printing shows the lack of these pieces, which gives them a peculiarly baid appearance. This fact must soon have been noticed after the printing of books began, and type-founders were the first to attempt to know prove the printing of books began, and type-founders were the first to attempt to Louis XV. These designs, which are without exception exceedingly forbidding, were declared by Luce to be perifect in every respect. And he never feet in the author of the body from each water baths at the famous spas, sought so eagerly by rheumatic and neuralgic sufferers. The powerful cleansing given to the surface of the body from each little jet in its own circle of work gradually eliminates the polson that may be lurking in the system, and the frequent deep reaching action of the massage and the electricity combined means restration and preservabined means restoration and preserva-tion of health. If there is a painful joint of the body, a catarrhal or kid-ney trouble, a sluggish liver, relief will surely come by faithful perseverwill surely come by faithful persever-ance. After the bath a spray of lis-terine or alcohol is sent all over the body. This prevents the possibility of cold.

The tonic effect of this bath must be felt to be appreciated. The skin, as everybody should know, is one of the main drains to free the system of as everybody should know, is one of the main drains to free the system of impurities. Keep the pores of this free and unclogged and it means half of health and activity. Add to this the limbering of the muscle and joint, the knead of tissues and abnormal deposits of flesh and the stimulation of the vital organs, and there is a firm compactness of body with a sustaining machinery, within that makes life a power and a joy. Every simple, easily-obtained help to this end is an important feature of modern life. The massage nozzle and the massage bath have come eastward from a sanitarium far out in the West, at the entrance of one of those magnificent gorges well called "royal." Mine owners and prospectors, chilled by the damp and exposure of the snow heights, come down in the spring with ache and soreness and, depression, seeking the relief for this. The physician in charge of the mineral baths developed the "massage nozzle." It is now at the service of all who are wise enough to adopt and adapt it.

The latest in toilet silver is hand engraved. The finish is either French gray or buraished, and the figures, generally floral designs, are engraved, as are one's initials or monogram. In some very handsome sets of this style this silver is heavily plated with gold before the engraving is done. This is the newest style of silver gilt. Aside from being handsomer—it cannot be distinguished from solid gold—it possesses one great virtue. It is not nearly so easily tarnished as silver. The style next in newness to hand-engraving is the empire, which comes in silver, burnished or French gray, which, by the way, takes (the place of oxydized, and in silver gilt. It is not so expensive as the hand-engraved, but a little more so than the old style, which showed heavy figures, really moulded, though they were supposed to have been hand-carved. For powder and bon-bon boxes, the favorite designs show many jewels in their heavy gold or silver tops. The handsomest of these boxes resemble squatty sugar bowls of elegant cut glass, and so large as to be used for a cracker jar. Indeed, a girl who receives one of these elegant affairs may well be puzzled as to whether she must thank the giver for a powder box, a bon-bon box, a sugar bowl or a cracker jar. The dealers themselves and designs galore. The newest in belts, vinaigrettes, purses and bracelets are heavily jeweld. Indeed, any and every article of silver or silver gilt, that can be is jeweled. There will be but three hold-overs from last weeks' bill, Crawford and Manning, the amusing moke team in an entire change of business; the Deonzos in their wonderfud acrobatic feats, and Adgie's second and positively last week.

All is quiet and calm. Then a faint breeze is felt. A flag on a staff that has hung limp flutters gently; then as the wind increases it stands out straight. The wind grows into a gale, then a tornado; the elements howl and the sky darkens, lightning vividiy flashes in forked tongues across the stage roofs, debris and fences are hurled through the air, trees are torn up and crashed upon the ground, and a house is demolished and blown away. The scene is terrific reality. Other striking scemic features are presented, and there is said to be a most happy blending of comedy with pathos throughout the play.

The management of "Two Little Vagrants," the melo-dramatic New York success of last season, has engaged Miss Mildred Holland to play the little hero "Fan Fan." Miss Holland will be remembered by many theater-goers throughout the country for her clever portrayal of Diana in "Paul Kauvar." Since then she has been with Augustin Daly's company, and lately made a pronounced hit as Hermia in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" production at the Madison Square Garden, New York City.

A New York exchange says: "The decision of the Appellate Court in the contested case of 'Orange Blossoms,' the manager of which was fined $250, will no doubt serve to purge the music halls and roof gardens of some of their indecencies. 'Orange Blossoms' il-lustrated the disrobing of a bride. She lustrated the disrobing of a bride. She entered her sleeping-room, removed her wedding garments, one after another, put on a nightgown, and went to bed. This was done without words, by a skillful pantomimist, Mile. Pilar-Morin, in the dantiest manner, with no exposure of person; but the court of Special Sessions declared it pernicious, and the same view of the question has now been taken by the higher tribunal. Exploits far more gross have since disgraced our stage. A certainty of punishment for such offenses would be a good thing."

Timely Suggestions for the Heads of Families.

Reasons Why Some Husbands Spend Many Nights at "the Lodge,"

A Happy Family.

There are a great many things necessary to make one's habitation a home, that is, a home in the true sense of the word-a place that every member of the family regrets to leave, even for a few hours-a place to which all are anxious to return as soon as outside duties will permit. Suitable furnishings, decorations, books, pictures, music, bric-a-brac and the like are requisite, but far above these requirements is the harmony that must prevail, the enjoyment that should be realized by the husband, the wife and the children.

This priceless boon is the blessing of many, but countless others seek to attain it in vain. The latter class, owing to their own discontent, multiply and spread the miseries of mankind, innoculate, so to speak, all with whom they come in contact. For the original cause of their misfortunes the unhappy victims may not be to blame. But for the serious results that follow they will be undoubtedly called to account in the world to come in addition to their earthly discomfort. By this we mean that sickness in one of its various forms is the prime factor, the root of an almost universal twin-evil-worry and dis-

The busband usually neglects his own health for economical reasons, blind to the undisputable truth that sooner or later the cost of medical treatment must be greater than if his lurking enemy was throttled in its incipiency. His wife's health fails to have proper attention, for the reason that the good woman usually bears her troubles heroically and uncomplainingly, buoyed up by the vain hope that nature will come to her rescue, while the ailments of the little ones and the half-grown children are looked upon as crossness, teething, bad temper, "growing pains," or some trivial or temporary trouble that will soon pass away. And in this manner sickness, discontent, misery and pain, the forerunners, frequently, of an untimely death, gain a foothold on what would otherwise be a nappy home, wreck the lives of one or more members and drive the glad smile of cheerfulness and joy from the lips and faces that were destined to lead an existence altogether different.

To be happy and successful in any undertaking, no matter whether it be in the mechanical, commercia l or professional line, one must first be equipped with health. Neglect this and you neglect everything. Abuse that which every man and woman should prize above all things and you are handicapped. Even pressed? your ambition is lessened, while your neighbor and competitor, strong mentally and physically, forge ahead, honored, loved, successful and happy, while you, discouraged and miserable, drop to the rear.

WINNING SPURS.

"Jeb" Stuart's Confederate Boy Hero.

The Gallant Young Pelham and His Horse Artillery in the Battles of Stuart's Corps.

[CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.] GEN. ROBERT E. LEE used to say that the troopers who rode under the banners of the dashing "Jeb" Stuart were the eyes of his "army, the outpost guard to detect and signal danger. But the day when Burnside's Federals marched across the plains of the Rappahannock to attack the Confederates on the heights of Fredericksburg, dense fogs obscured the field. A trooper in his saddle could not see beyond his horse's head. The swish and tramp of the marching column revealed their movements, however, and the troopers emptied their carbines at the blind targets, then slowly retreated toward 'the hills. There was mounting in hot haste the moment the dull reports of firing reached Stuart's reserve bivouacs. Still the attack was a surprise and Stonewall Jackson's line 'upon Hamilton Jackson's line 'upon Hamilton Heights, in danger of being overrun by the Federals before the men in by the Federals before the men in gray were ready for battle. A crisis like that must always have its hero, and the hero of Stonewall Jackson's battle at Hamilton Heights proved to be Maj. John Pelham, the boy leader of the horse artillery of Stuart's famous cavalry corps. The little major ordered his batteries to move down into the plain but the horses were into the plain, but the horses not in harness and the men scattered about the camp. As soon as the teams for a single cannon were ready Maj. Pelham started down the slope, followed at a gallop by one Na poleon gun, manned by creoles from new Orleans. These creoies had been trained for their business by the boy artillerist when he was a cadet just out of West Point, and men and leader knew each other. Their gun was the first to break the silence

When the Federal leaders saw the when the receral leaders saw the havoc created in their advancing ranks by that single cannon they ordered five of their own batteries, one ather another, to make a target of it. Other guns were rushed down the slope to join Pelham. When the the of BEP Run, find cen. Te.m' Struct offered him a new battery of six preces of horse artillery.

A battery of horse artillery which keeps its end up with a flying column like that led by Struct finds enough excitement in war to cool the bottest blood. Pelham was riased to the rank of captain, and whenever Stuart rode on the peninsula his guns were at the front. At the battle of Cold Harbor and again at Manassas, Stuart's troopers fought side by side with Stonewall Jackson's corps. Jackson took Pelham by the hand on the field at Manassas and complimented him for the service of his guns. The boy was then 23 years old, and was promoted to command a battalion of artillery, with the rank of major.

After several hours of the most desperate and bloody fighting on record, the safety of the left flank of Lee's army at the battle of Antietam depended upon Stuart's cavalry and Maj. Pelhams' guns. On the retreat from that field, after crossing the Potomac into Virginia, Pelham added to his laurels by a marvelous feat of personal gallantry. The Federals were close upon the heels of Lee's army, which was guarded on the retreat by Stuart's troopers. At one point the pursuing Federals came close upon a gun which Pelham kept far in advance of the others. Stuart ordered the boy to retire, but he begged so hard to re-suing Federals came close upon a gun which Pelham kept far in advance of the others. Stuart ordered the boy to retire, but he begged so hard to remain a little longer that the request was granted. It became hotter and hotter, and even the cannoners took advantage of Stuart's order and ran away. Pelham fired the plece in the face of the enemy, and then, all alone, mounted one of the lead horses to haul the cannon away. The horse was shot down. Pelham cut the traces, mounted another horse, and after he had got the remaining five fairly into a gallop the second horse was shot down under him. Mounting another, he started again, and the third horse was killed and cut from the traces. With the three remaining ones the piece was hauled back to safety.

All this was previous to the battle off Fredericksburg, where the young artillerist won the high ecomium from Stonewall Jackson. Lee said to Jackson at that time, "It is glorious to see such courage in one so young." In his report Gen. Lee went still further, for he coupled the name of the boy major with those of his generals, calling him "the gallant Pelham." A commission as lieutenant-colonel was issued at Richmond when Lee's report was read at the war department, but the parchment did not reach Lee's bivouac on the Rappahannock until the gallant boy had met his death in battle.

One day Stuart's line of pickets along the river was suddenly attacked by the Federals at Kelly's ford. Pelham was in the vicinity, but not on duty with his battalion. Sending a courier to bring up his guns, he galloped toward the scene of fighting and, overtaking a regiment of mounted mentaking a regiment of a sudden attack, placed himself at its head and shouted. "Forward, boys! Forward, to victory and glory!" At that moment, a Rederal shell burst over the squadron he was leading, and a fragment pentrated his brain. "The noble, the chivalric, the gallant Pelham' is no more! His loss is irreparable," said Stuart in a message wired to the Confederate Congress.

But the most remarkable tribute of all, and one so rarely paid to a soldier of subordinate rank that it is worthy to be quoted in full, was a genéral order issued by Stuart to commemmente the tragic death of the boy hero. It was as follows and appeared in the archives of the War Department of the Confederate States.

STYX, THE BATTERY DOG
Trained to Carry Sticks He Carried Cannon Balls.
[CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

He was a fox terrier in the days when fox terriers were not as common as now, and he made his appearance in the battery one morning just as we were "hitching up" at daylight to resume the march interrupted by a night's rest in the vicinity of a small town in Louisland. He attracted my attention by running up and placing at my feet a small stick and then backing off a little ways with every muscle of his body on the stretch, asking me as pleadingly as if he spoke, to throw it that he might have the exquisite pleasure of catching it to be brought back again and thrown.

The captain of a battery has at such a time something else to do than throw sticks for dogs to fetch, and when Styx saw me mothnt my horse he abandoned me and started off to a sergeant who treated him with even greater contempt. Nothing abashed he picked up the stick and trotted with the column, which was now moving along the road and into which the battery hauled from the road-side with the accompaniments of clanking trace-chains and rumbling wheels.

Styx maintained his position some-Styx maintained his position somewhere between our gun carriages all day, refusing to be allured by the dashing cavalry or the sober infantry as now and then changes occurred in the column, and late in the afternoon, when we halted for the night, he reported himself at my particular fire as if he were on duty as an orderly. He asked not for food or careses, but putting down a stick at my feet, declared in his fox terrier language, that if I would please throw that for him just once he would consider all

That day gave Styx a reputation through our whole corps. The commanding general heard of him and requested me to bring him up to proad-quarters. An admiring circle of efficers sat about him one evening and discussed whether or no dogs could be generally used in the artillery.

Three days after came the catastrophe. We were drawn up in him of battle to await developments, and for a long time nothing developed. Finally a distant battery began to give us its attention, Now and then as the shells

Three days after came the catastrophe. We were drawn up in line of battle to await developments, and for a long time nothing developed. Finally a distant battery began to give us its attention, Now and then as the shells exploded in our front or over our heads. Styx was sitting, with eazer eyes, in the midst of his favorite detachment. Suddenly an almost spent six-pound solid shot from the enemy struck just in front of us, and relled, as it seemed, slowly into the battery. "More fun!" said Styx to himsely, and jumped for it. But then his experience with artillery had been of the briefest. The moving mass of iron, which seemed as harmless as a rubber ball, crushed the life out of the active little voluncer.

We all mourned him, and the general said, when I told him about it. "Well, you know war can't be carried on without some loss." F. W. CARRUTH.

HARVESTING SEAWEED.

Some of the Curious Customs That Attend it in the Channel Islands. [CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

the average American citizen this To the average American citizen this fact arries with it little of import, but how much does it mean to the poor peasant coast dweller of the British isles! To these hardy, but poverty-stricken people, the annual opening of the seawed harvest means income and even food. For during "hard seasons" the coast peasants of Western Ireland live almost entirely on seaweed and cliff moss. And even when they do not have to feed upon the seaweed, it may serve to bring them in a miserably small, but assured income, when sold for fertilizing purposes.
In the Channel Islands the gathering of seaweed and its sale as a fertilizer, ecomes during the summer a para-nount business. So highly indeed is becomes during the summer a para-mount business. So highly indeed is seaweed prized that the legislative chember of the isle of Jersey (for lit-tle Jersey has home rule, though big Ireland has not,) devotes special at-tention to the subject. About one hundred thousand tons of weed are gathered in Jersey alone during a single removal.

A large proportion of the crop is at once, while fresh and wet, spread over the fields. As the poetess, Eliza Cook, the fields. As the poetess, Enza Cook, sang:

The wrack! the wrack! O the wrack shall be The theme of our chanting night.
For we come to gather the grass o' the sea, To quicken the grain of the earth. In Cornwall, Wales, the Scottish Hebrides and Ireland the seaweed harvest also begins in the early summer, and is a considerable source of profit. But seaweed tathering in all its glory must be sought for in the Channel Isles...

Rounders and Feeder.

Rounders, that old-time game with bat and ball, is always a favorite. It bat and ball, is always a favorite. It is played with bat and ball by any number divided into equal sides. The bat is a round stick about two feet long; five posts are placed in a circle as bases, and one player, called the feeder, stands in front of the home to throw the ball for the striker to hit.

The following diagram gives the position of the bases and feeder. H is the home, where the striker stands, and F is the feeder.

The figures represent the bases; the outplayers are distributed about the field. The play commences thus: The feeder tosses the ball slowly to the player, who strikes at it. If he hits the ball store and see the strikes are the second see the second feeder tosses the ball slowly to the player, who strikes at it. If he hits it he runs to first base, and so onward to the second, third and so onward to the second the second the second the second the second the game proceeds without him. When all are out but one player, the last takes what is called the "rounder;" that is, he has the choice of three balls, and if he succeeds in striking the ball far enough to enable him to run completely around the circle before the ball can be brought or thrown in to the home, all his side go in again for another inning, but if he misses each of the three balls or is caught or ground out, the outsiders come in, and the game is reversed, to be played again in the same manner by those who were before the feeders. "Feeder" is a similar game to rounders, except that only one player, the feeder, is in the field, who remains out till he succeeds in catching the ball, or striking the player with it as he passes from base to base. Feeders is played without sides, usually by three or four players.

He was noted as an athlete, a fearless rider, and his feats of hersemanship remained a tradition at the academy for years. Beling a native of Alabama, Pelham responded to the call of his State, resigned his cadetship and started for the South. On the way he was intercepted by Federal authorities and was placed under surveillance. Reaching Louisville, he found the river picketed. Adopting the disguise of a Federal aid, he went into society, and won to his cause a loyal Yankee girl. She tried to induce film to stand by the old flag, but finding that his heart was set upon the one with the single star, she rowed him across the Ohio River in a skiff and bade him farewell on the Kentucky shore. After the battle Stonewall turned to his chieftain and said: "Have you another Felham, Gen. Lee? If so I wish you would give him to me."

Fredericksburg was the last great hattle of this beardless boy artillerist, for he was killed in a slight engagement soon afterward. He then held the rank of major and was 24 years old. Already his exploits had been heralded in Europe, and the London Times, noticing his death, said: "For his age, no soldier on either side in the war has won such fame as has young Pelham."

Cuba's Mert President.

[Contributed to The Times.]

D the island by special messenger Mazora render it almost certain that Gen. Bartolome Maso will be the next President of the provi-sional government of Cuba.

There is probably no man living who is better fitted or more entitled to oc-cupy the presidential chair than this trepid and uncompromising defender of Cuban independence.

In no other way can Cuba show her gratitude and appreciation of those sterling qualities which have caused Maso to be loved and admired by the million and more of partiots who are praying and fighting against overwhelming odds for liberty. But it is not gratitude alone which prompts the selection of Maso to fill the posi-tion of chief executor. EMINENTLY FITTED FOR THE POSITION.

The letters of Gomez and Marti give

The letters of Gomez and Marti give to Bartolomei Maso the honor of being rather of the present revolution. During the first weeks of the war word was sent to him offering $60,000 for La Jaquita. This Maso refused, saying that he would rather apply the torch while the estate was still his own property. That night he burned every building to the ground.

Maso is 67 years old, although he looks ten years younger. His eyes are keen and bright and an abundance of iron-gray hair covers a well-shaped head. He is a great reader and student and an enthuslastic supporter of education. His hammock i swings under the same canopy with that of Salvador Cisneros, the present President, and between the two there is, not only perfect harmony, but a genuine brotherly-love and esteem. Should Maso, by any accident, become President of Cuba tomorrow, there would be no radical change in the policy of the administration, and even the present Cabinet would probably remain intact.

RATHER LIVE A HERMIT THAN RATHER LIVE A HERMIT THAN SUBMIT.

But one thing is most certain, there his presence in quiet council or heated debate is always felt. He is an effective orator, legislator or fighter. He is the Richelieu of the Cuban republic. Small of stature, and slight in build, he is still a most magnetic man, and one can almost feel the thoughts that emanate from the mind before they are uttered. Maso is very observant of details, an excellent listener and a brilliant conversationalist. Although making no pretense as a poet many bright stanzas, containing both rhyme and reason, as well as measure, spring from his brain, affording entertainment and instruction to those around him.

A portion of his education was acquired in Paris as well as his knowledge of the French language. Of English he knows but very little, but that little he knows correctly. I had been seweral weeks in his company, not dreaming that he understood a ment and instruction to those around him.

A portion of his education was acquired in Paris as well as his knowledge of the French language. Of English he knows but very little, but that little he knows correctly. I had been several weeks in his company, not dreaming that he understood a word of English, when he one day indulged in a comment so well placed and pronounced that I was astounded. But no amount of coaxing could induce him to attempt a conversation in the language.

FIRST MAN TO TAKE UP ARMS.

Maso studies men as doctors would patients, and he seldom makes a mistake in diagnosing their true strength or weakness. He is effectively diplomatic where the present occupant of the chair is inclined to be combative. And yet both of these grand old men are devoted to and relations are allowed in a given the present occupant of the chair is inclined to be combative. And yet both of these grand old men are devoted to and relations as a selected and old men are devoted to and relations to the represent the people. The relation of the sald will permit no cuban to be anything but at axpaying serf. If we would have self-respect we must have independence. "If we cannot enjoy freedom ourselves let us fight and win it for our children. To me, the very thought of the chair is inclined to be combative to spain."

Maso, like all Cubans, is a great admitted to be combative. And yet both of these grand of the chair is inclined to be combative. And yet both of these frem or be slaves. Spain will never like would have sold any supp

And yet both of these grand old, men are devoted to and toiling for the attainment of the same pur-pose, the freedom of Cuba. Cisneros's admiration of Maso's ability is so sincere that he has even offered to

There are many reasons for this universal and unbounded faith in Maso. With hand and brain he has always been ready to fight for Cuban inde-With hand and brain he has always been ready to fight for Cuban independence, and, although the son of a Spaniard, he would never be content with anything but independence absolute. With his two brothers, Rafael and Isals, he fought through the "ten years' war." from '88 to '78, winning the rank of major-general. His brothers lost their lives, but begged him never to give up the struggle until-Cuba was free. He refused to sign the treaty of Zanjou, and when Marti, on February 22, 1895, gave the word for the beginning of the present revolution, Bartolomel Maso was the first man to take up arms against Spain.

He did not wait to see what others would do, or who would follow; he left the city of Manzanillo, his birthplace, and went to his country estate of La Jaquita, nine miles distant, where he commenced to gather about him a force of patriots. Here he was visited by a delegation of autonomists, headed by Herminio Levya, who tried to per-Maso replied: "Herminio, you and some of your followers, in the old war signed with me an edict which made it an offense punishable with death to an offense punishable with a proposition of peace based on any condition but absolute independence. From this moment is shall establish the same rule in my camp, and if you say another word on the subject to me I shall put that law fitte execution. You will take buck with you $10,000 which I owe to Manfollas of Clenfuegos. I do not wint it said that I have gone to war to this spaniard and then I am done with the race, except to fight it until we have liberty and independence in Cuba.

The fext day Maso was joined by Amidor Guerra, and Enrique Cespedes.
Together they marched with thirty followers upon the village of Calcito, which they captured from the Guarda civillar setting a small supply of arms and ammunition, which started the resolution. I Sentiage de Cube or the pproach a Cuban soldier with a propo-

WHERE WE ARE AT.

Sometimes when rushing of the can,
We wonder where we're at;
It may be when, the keg being low,
The beer is getting flat;
It may be when it's late at night
And we from home afar,
Find out, to our intense disgust,
We've missed the last darned car;
Too well we know the wife will smell a rat,
And let us know distinctly where we're at.

And when at length our weary feet
Reach home and find the door
Fast locked, and not a light in sight,
We know what's coming, sure!
We pound and pound and pound and pound,
Until our hands are kore,
But ah, at length a well-known step
Is heard to cross the floor.
Great Joye! Won't let me in; in fact, refuse's flat;
"Men who come home at 2 a.m. can stay just where they're at."

and there was nothing which he thought the good man and his little children would prize so much as his beautiful parrot. So when he came ashore he bought a fine cage for pretty Poll, and placing the parrot within it sent them down to the parsonage. The cage was put on the table in the sitting-room, and Polly looked about her as if she were trying to determine whether she should feel at home in her new quarters. The scrvant went to call the minister, and he came in with his happy little children to see the beautiful parrot which their friend, the captain, had sent them. But as they gathered about the table Polly began to talk, and she poured out such a volume of oaths and shocking profanity that the good "minister, selzing his little children by the hand, beat a hasty retreat from the room, thinking that the very Evil One himself must have taken possession of the bird which his friend, the captain, had sent him.

But all parrots do not swear, so they are great pets with their bright plumage and sociable ways. Mrs. Freeman G. Teed, who is now stopping at the Redlands Hotel, writes me as follows about her parrot:

"You will find inclosed an article taken from the Cincinnati Enquirer in regard to a parrot having laid some eggs. I did not know until I saw it that it was considered unusual but I wish to tell you about my parrot who has done equally as well. Poll laid an egg eight years ago, and one in her cage except to sleep, and walks all over the house like one of the family. The eggs were in size about as large as a guinea fowl, blue white."

And here is the clipping of which she speaks, and which I am sure that my little friends will read with she speaks, and which I am sure that my little friends will read with she speaks, and which I am sure that my little friends will read with the she speaks, and which I am sure that my little friends will read with the she speaks, and which I am sure that my little friends will read with the she speaks, and which I am sure that my little friends will read with the she was a

I saw a few days ago a little child upon the street cars that my heart was sorry for. Not more than five that my little friends will read with interest:

"George W. Elstun, residing on Gil-

last week's "bargain week" at the People's Store. To buy when you can obtain a bargain whether you need a thing or not, that is human nature, thing or not, that is human nature, and the way people thronged those heavily-laden counters from early morn to dusky eve, was suggestive of the innate tendencies of the human kind. "I'm busy attending the sales, and buying things that I shall use by and by—no, I don't reed those things now, but I will sometime, and I get them cheap. So I am just laying in a store, and really I have no time for anything else now," remarked one lady to another in the hearing of the Saunterer.

There is one thing. I mused, that is proved by this, times are getting easier, and money is a vast deal plentier than it was a few months ago. The procession has caught up with the "advance agent of prosperity," and the calamity howlers will soon be out of time. We are entering upon an era of growth and prosperity, such as the braying of even Billy Bryan cannot disturb. And as if old Mother Earth were in sympathy with our affairs, she is opening her rich mines and pouring out her golden treasures. The poor man makes his fortune in a few days and becomes the "bloated capitalist." And what is the roar who "works with his jaw," the labor agitator going to do about it? Is he going to decoy the fortunate man as an enemy of labor, because, forsooth, hisbrawny arm has wrested the rich treasure from the soil and his hitherto empty coffers are filled with gold? Hasn't a man a right to the fruits of his honest labors, be they of brawn or brain? Just let your honest sense of right answer, and we are sure to an echo what your response will be.

THE SAUNTERER. There is one thing, I mused, that

THE PARTY OF THE P

FREE, FREE.

Every Day This Week all Sick Persons are Invited To Call at Doctors Shores' Office, 345 S. Main St., and Receive a Careful Diagnosis, Complete Examination and Good Advice Absolutely Free.

This generous offer is made at this particular season of the year for two reasons, viz: First, we have more time to carefully talk over your case with you, noting each minute symptom and correctly weighing each and every complication that may be connected with your disease, so if you have a very old, chronic, complicated trouble, don't miss this opportunity, to come in and visit with us, tell us your trouble and see if anything can be done for you. Remember, if we cannot cure you, we do not advise you to take our treatment.

We Guarantee to Cure All Cases Placed Under Treatment.

Secondly:-At this particular season of the year the climatic conditions are particularly favorable for the treatment and cure chronic diseases.

Catarrh, which is the most prevalent of all chronic diseases, yields to treatment in one to two months.

Rheumatism is treated at this season with less liabilities to back-sets.

Asthma, that most distressing of all diseases can be cured now on account of the extreme dryness of the atmosphere.

Kidney Trouble should be cured at this season of the year, while the weather is favorable. In fact, nearly all chronic diseases, owing to the favorable climatic conditions can be cured now.

CURED OF CATARRH AND DEAFNESS.

Little Raymond Tunnicliff Restored to Health.

Mrs. R. Berry, who resides at No. 1016 East Fourth street, Boyle Heights, says: "Doctor, you do not know how grateful I feel to you for what you have done for my little nephew. He has been such a sufferer for over a year, and I am much gratified to see him restored to his usual health. For a long time we have noticed that when he would stop up so that he could not breathe without difficulty. His breath was often very offensive and his sleep was very much disturbed. Often at night he made such a snoring noise that it was positively distressing to hear him. Two months ago I placed him under treatment with Drs. Shores, and since that time I have closely followed their instructions, and I am glad to say that he has improved ever since and, at this time he seems to be entirely cured. He can breathe freely through his nose the breath is no longer offensive, his sleep is sound and refreshing, and I cheerfullly recommend Drs. Shores' treatment for catarrh. Any one interested may call on me at any time and I will gladly verify the above statement.

Strange to say, there are never any explosions due to noxious gases. The tunnels and shafts are constantly filled with pure air. Sometimes a tunnel becomes nearly closed by reason of the timbers becoming depressed from the heavy weight which rests upon them above. In fact, very little fatality has accompanied the working of this mine, and though commerce rattles above in the light of day, the thousands of ghost-like forms beneath earth contentedly pick a living from the hard ore, apparently very well satisfied with their lot in life.

KLONDYKE'S RECEPTION OF A TENDER

shades of night were falling fast, As o'er an Alaskan tundra passed A tenderfoot, of presence gaunt and thin (But vast the furs he travels in:) He'd gone a hundred miles that day
Nor seen a campfire where he could stay;
"Oh, where am 1?" at last he groaned;
A tombstone by the wayside softly moaned, "Klondyke."

He sped through hills of snowy peaks Untrod for months by human feet; He roamed o'er ice, which never thawed, Thro' forests wild, while hunger gnawed; He crossed o'er rivers still unnamed. Saw dusky redskins yet untamed,
"Where am I now?" he wildly cried,
A starving miner sadly sighed.
"Klondyke."

Still on he sped, in search of gold, soli on he spec, in search of gold, Half-frozen by the awful cold, Up rocky slopes he madly flew, Up peaks where naught but icides grew— Land of eternal snow and hail, Where naught but dead men tell the tale; 'What place is this?" he wildly howled, A hungry grizzly fiercely growled, "Klondyke."

was made for a Redeemer, for the Savior, which God saw that He would require.

There are no tomorrows with God. His eye scans the vastness of eternity and from the beginning He saw what was to be.

And the immeasurable grandeur of divine forgiveness, the infinite compassion of pardoning love! The infinite stooping to the finite, the sinless to the sinful! The redeemed man will come nearer to God than he could ever have come had he not have sinned. In no other way could God's love for men have been so fully manifested as on Calvary. Here, for man, his Creator dies. In His blood human transgressions are blotted out. For one sin even, man needs a Redeemer. No after life of perfection could atone for one sin against God. And for our many, many sins what hope is there for us but in a divine Savior? Where, oh, sin-burdened heart, is there such hope to be found as in those words of tender and compassionate love. "I have put all thy sins behind me and thy transgressions are covered?"

behind me and thy transgressions are covered?"

Is there aught "debasing" in a man's humbling himself on account of sin, and pleading for forgiveness merely from them against whom he has sinned? God evidently does not think that there is, for His most gracious promises are to such as do thus humble themselves. His love He gives them and eternal life, and they shall see His face and dwell with Him forever.

Him forever. Christ as our Redeemer—that is the Christ as our Redeemer—that is the corner-stone of Christian hope. Nothing but a belief in "Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God by miracles and signs which God did by him." can draw the soul to faith and open it to the power of a supernatural and new-creative mercy."

As says Horace Bushnell in his "Character of Jesus:" "It is no ingenious fetches of argument that we waft; no external testimony gathered here and there from the records of past ages suffices to end our doubts: but it is the new sense opened in us by Jesus himself—a sense deeper than words and more immediate than inference—of the miraculous grandeur of His life; a glorious agreement felt between His works and His person such that His miracles are proved, to us in our feeling, believed in by that inward testimony. On this inward

One Hundred Dollars Buys Any Vehicle on Our Ground Floor.

This offer holds good until Tuesday night, August 31. But people who contemplate taking advantage of this most special of opportunities will do well to make an immediate selection. There is but one vehicle of a kind in this lot, therefore it is easy to be seen how delay may limit your choice. Every wagon offered is strictly high class in material, making and finish. Many of them sell in the regular way for $110.00 some as high as $200.00.

Ladies

Are especially invited to call and examine this most interesting assortment. While in a certain sense they are "Bargain Counter" goods, they bear no stamp to such effect except their lowness of price. Every man should appreciate this chance.

Included

In this half hundred of up-to-date vehicles at half their market value, are Top Buggies, Phaetons, Delivery Wagons, Surries, Carts, Road Wagons, Traps and other desirable patterns, With many of them we furnish the harness, which, considering the price, is as good as found, Special Notice to Liverymen.

We want to impress this fact on the proprietors of livery stables, both in the city and out, that this is the chance of the year to fill up the weak places in your vehicle stock. Many liverymen have already taken advantage of our offer, and we expect to welcome many more to our establishment. lishment this week.

During the past week we have sold a number of these vehicles to be shipped to San Francisco and San Diego. This is an undeniable evidence of the bargains offered. The purchasers would hardly buy here and pay freight unless these were genuine "snaps."
